Evangelista to serve as associate provost

I am delighted to announce that Dr. Nancy Evangelista will serve as Associate Provost for the 2010-2011 academic year. Her duties will include serving as acting Dean of the College of Business, Chair of School Psychology and Dean of the Graduate School. She will also support me in strategic planning, assessment and supporting international programs and initiatives.

Dr. Evangelista joined the faculty in 1997 as a faculty member in the School Psychology program and was promoted to full professor in 2008. She has served as chair of the School Psychology program since 2006 and has served as the Acting Associate Provost since 2009.

Nancy Evangelista has worked very hard over the last year in creating a responsive and engaged set of support services. She has been willing to take on new challenges and work diligently to develop comprehensive support for our academic programs. She is committed to excellence and works in a collaborative manner with all members of the Alfred University community.

I am confident that she will provide excellent leadership in her new role as interim dean of the College of Business and will continue to provide a high level of leadership as chair of the School Psychology program.

Crandall appointed dean of libraries

I am pleased to announce I have appointed Steve Crandall as Dean of Libraries. He succeeds Carla Johnson, who retired at the end of the '09-'10 academic year.

Steve has been a supportive colleague, mentor and friend to many of us at the university for over 30 years. He has been recognized by faculty and students as a hard working librarian who will make the extra effort to help others throughout the university succeed.

In 1998 he assumed the position of director of Herrick Library and has been an active participant on committees as well as a mentor for students, faculty and staff.

Steve's experience with budgeting, physical plant oversight and project administration will provide a strong foundation for the challenges he will be facing. His successful implementation of the automated library system FLORIS provided great training for the implementation strategies that will be necessary as we move to a more technologically rich environment in our libraries. Steve's even temper and strong vision are traits that will serve him well in his new role.

Mark Smith named director of Scholes Library

I am pleased to announce Mark Smith has accepted my offer to become director of Scholes Library and associate dean of Libraries.

Mark has been a librarian at Scholes since 1991 and has served as information systems librarian since 1994. He assumed the responsibilities of head of technical services for the library in 2002. He was promoted to full librarian in 2007.

Mark has made significant contributions to the operations of Scholes Library for nearly two decades. His sound scholarship and teaching have been recognized by his colleagues and peers and his service to the University has been vital as is evidenced by his contribution to committees and the Faculty Senate. In 2004, he was recognized with the SUNY Chancellor's award for Excellence in Librarianship. We are relying on his leadership to help us meet the challenges of the new academic year.
