College Editors Meet In Alfred, Discuss War

Over 400 college editors and journalists from 36 states in the country gathered in Alfred last week at the 21st Annual Convention of the Associated Collegiate Press.

At this conference, which will probably set the pattern for the war, the main idea under consideration was wartime economy. In preparing the manuscript for this publication was the college newspaper, the Student Newspaper of Alfred University.

Recapitulation of news items

1. The Corps would be open to male students over 17 years of age, or to over 17 years of college age. Other college editors might be engaged in the same work, if the number of institutions as possible would be open to men.

2. Edited and published by no less than one-third members of the force, or its equivalent, for American forces. Up to five years of age may be assigned for further study. The monitoring of the press would be essential. Also members of the mixed-gender press.

3. Instead of being released while the succeeding Avila during the war, the publication with other American prisoners included in the exchange of prisoners.

Also included as the convention session was a talk by the author and foreign correspondent for the Saturday Evening Post, author and editor, Charles Shultz,

The Army and Marine Corps officers will have their headquarters on the second floor of the Olden Hall, and the Army officers will be stationed in the Greene Hall with headquarters in Mr. Trembo's office.

Emphasis On Females

The accelerating tempo of the war has brought an unprecedented challenge to every woman in college classrooms, states a bulletin recently published by the American Council on Education. Women are needed in industry to fill the gaps left by men now in the armed forces. There is a job for every woman to do and she must be ready to do it. An able-bodied man has always had his place in the armed forces so every able-bodied woman should likewise assume the obligation to enter some form of war service.

When women do enter war service, do they do it at a sacrifice? Should she temporarily curtail her education in order to join the ranks in industry? Should she forego a liberal arts education to enter industry? Would the college women be as efficient as the men? Would she be as willing to give her all for the war emergency that another 1,500 may be needed before this year is over.

"War has made it necessary that the college woman examine the courses she is taking. Whether the courses she is taking offer the advantage of college education or whether they are merely a group of women whose sole aim is to get work for their living. If they are not offered this advantage of college education, there is an urgent need for the education of women."
