On Wednesday morning, May 25, a student body meeting was held at the hour of the usual assembly period, at which time the loyalty medal was voted to Ray C. Witter; Charles Lake and John McMahon were elected business and assistant business manager of the Fiat Lux respectively and important amendments were made to the Students Association constitution and Campus Rules.

The constitution of the Students' Association was amended as follows: Article V, Section 11—

A vacancy on the Student Senate shall be filled by the election by the student body of two persons nominated by the class lacking the senator or representative.

Article IX, Section 3—

Two-thirds of the student body shall constitute a quorum at these meetings. This section did read, "Fifty members of the Association shall constitute a quorum at these meetings."

Article X, Section 3—

Section 3 which read, "The Campus Rules shall not be amended except during the month of May and only in the manner hereinafter provided," was struck out.

Mrs. Mix Displays Usual Versatility in Rendition of "Lonesome-Like"

STUDENTS DEMONSTRATE RESULTS OF EXCELLENT COACHING

Mrs. M. E. Mix instituted a valuable innovation in Alfred's scholastic activities last Thursday evening in Memorial Hall when the class in the Fundamentals of Speech put on the following varied program of readings from contemporary literature:

"Alumni Football," by Grantland Rice
Ray C. Witter

"A Little Change for Edward," by Mary Stewart Cutting
Anna Lown

"The Mermaid," by Alfred Tennyson
Helena Crandall

"The Whirligig of Life," by O. Henry
Irwin A. Conroe

"The Kirby Wedding" by Hayden Carruth
Margaret Emerson

"The Nightingale and the Rose," by Oscar Wilde
Alice M. Dickinson

"When the Summer Boarders Come," by Nixon Waterman
Edward J. Teal

A one-act play, "Lonesome-Like," by Harold Brighthouse
Mrs. M. E. Mix

The audience enjoyed each number. All the participants gave their several parts with zest and a considerable degree of appreciation. Perhaps Miss Crandall, Miss Dickinson, and Mr. Conroe produced the most finished work. In her interpretation and voice-control Mrs. Mix gave an admirable rendition of the unique "Lonesome-Like."

COSMOPOLITAN CLUB HAS PROGRAM OF UNUSUAL MERIT

Dr. Ide Presents Novel Address—A Much Appreciated Discussion

At the weekly meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club held Sunday night a very interesting and instructive program was offered, the principal speakers of the evening being Dr. Ide and Castro Oliviera. A fair sized crowd was present and a very enjoyable evening was spent by all.

The subject of Dr. Ide's address was "The Psychology of Nations". The gist of his thought is as follows:

Every nation has its own mental habits. These taken together make a part of the nation. Where the blood of nations is mixed, there results a fusion of these habits giving a product of mentality far superior to the mentality of either nation. Some-

PURPLE AND GOLD TRIUMPHS OVER BROWN AND WHITE

Old Rival Defeated In Final Varsity Event of Season

ALFRED MEN SHOW GOOD FORM ON CINDERS AND IN FIELD

The purple track and field athletes triumphed over the St. Bonaventure men in the dual meet held on Alfred Field last Friday afternoon, the final score being 66-49. St. Bonaventure took seven first places, while Alfred scored six, but the Varsity made up for the discrepancy by taking eleven seconds, and six thirds. This meet marked the resumption of athletic relationships with the brown and white, and all events were run off in a pleasing manner, there being no dissension from members of either team. The meet was close and interesting, and merited a much larger crowd than was present.

Alfred men showed improved form over their work in the Geneva meet, and in some events decidedly outclassed the Bonaventure men. The relay race, won by Bonaventure, was a disappointing event for Alfred, as Campbell, the first purple runner, after a pretty race, dropped his stick near the finish line and at least seven valuable seconds were lost.

Monahan of St. Bonaventure showed great form in the dashes, taking an easy first in both the hundred and two twenty. Banks of Alfred finished second in both events. In the 440 Sheatz of Bonaventure beat Ford to the tape by a narrow margin. Worden finished a good third. The 880 was won easily by Alfred, as was the mile and two mile. In the latter event both purple men to finish overlapped the St. Bonaventure runners.

Boyd won the 220 yard hurdles with Ford second. Bonaventure did not place. In the shot put, disc throw, and high jump honors went to Bonaventure, but Drummond took the pole vault, and Worden easily won the broad jump.

Gavagan of St. Bonaventure was the all around performer of the day. He entered the shot put, broad jump, high jump, pole vault, hundred yard dash, and relay race, winning first in the shot put and second in the broad jump aside from making a creditable showing in the other events, especially the relay.

MEMORIAL DAY

Do we really ever stop to think of what Memorial Day means? Many of us do. But on the other hand there are any number of us who do not. If we can't enter into the spirit of the day it is obviously best that we cease to set aside a time in which to commemorate the lives of those "who here gave their lives that the nation might live."

Academic work is important. No one doubts that. However, a man who will think of spending Memorial Day in the preparation of work for his classes is something worse than a grind—he is a man who thereby stamps himself as one who is lacking in sensibilities and emotions. He is absolutely incapable of appreciating the finer things of life. Yet right here within the last few days we have heard people express their intention of spending the day in study, of spending it in recreation, and in fact in every conceivable manner except the one in which it was intended.

Let everyone stop for a minute to think of what this day means. Let us consider how our ancestors in the Civil War and those of our own generation in the World War fought and bled for their country. Many of them gave their lives. It is unnecessary to depict the terrible scenes of 1861, or to attempt to describe the unholy sight of the Meuse-Argonne Campaign or Saint Miheil. We know that these men gave their all to the last. We know that they did it cheerfully. If they could shed their very life blood for us and die in agony with words of praise of country on their lips, ought we not to be willing to consecrate at least a portion of the day that the nation has set aside for the commemoration of our soldiers, in the manner in which it is intended. It may seem absurd to feel it necessary to suggest any such thing. Nevertheless, it is necessary to do so.

We do not want to bring to mind the terrible events of the world's War, but on the other hand we do not want to forget that we have just passed through the greatest war in the history of the world. There seems to be a strong tendency in this direction, with many students and among those who lead a life of study and retirement. No matter how natural this attitude may be it ought not to be tolerated. To hear the recent military struggle referred to as "Our war affair" or some epithet a dozen times less significant is an offense which ought to arouse the spirit of patriotic indignation in any red blooded man. It may be true that it is not possible for one who took no active part in the war to feel the struggle with the same keenness of one who did. However, any man who hasn't more decency about him than to speak with an air of disregard and even flippancy of an event which cost the nation so much sorrow ought to be brought to his senses.

We all should be willing to forget our pedantic little world of French, Spanish and so forth and participate in an occasion like Memorial Day with the proper spirit.

SENATE MEETING

May 26, 1921

The first meeting of the 1921-22 Senate was called to order by the new President. Thomas Walker was unanimously elected Vice President for the ensuing year. Chester Feig and Margaret Glaspey were nominated for Secretary and Treasurer. Miss Glaspey was elected.

The faculty recommended that the following section be adopted as a regulation of the Students' Association: All social and athletic events are prohibited during the week of Interscholastic Track Meet, and the week prior to final examinations of each term, except on the Saturday evenings of said weeks. Any necessary exception to this rule may be made by joint consent of the committee on Student Life and the Student Senate.

LET'S THINK IT OVER

What would you think of a man who sat and fished while his neighbors fought to save his house from a flood? You would probably say he didn't have interest enough in his own prosperity to care to protect his home. What would you say if the United States had sent Pershing over the ocean to fight, to maintain her honor, and to protect her rights and then had promptly left him to his own resources as soon as he had landed in France? Suppose our country had taken a holiday on the day our soldiers fought the battle of Argonne. Would the knowledge of this act have inspired the fighters to battle with every ounce of their energy? Would you have expected them to win that battle? Certainly not. Again, suppose the French cabinet had gone out and played golf while Joffre fought the battle of the Marne. Would that attitude have persuaded our country to cast our lot with France? No. We can't expect a man to play his best or battle his mightest when he hasn't the backing he should have. Then how did we expect our track heroes to win the Meet against our old rival St. Bonaventure when we didn't have spirit enough or gumption enough to amble down to the athletic field and show them by our presence if in no other way, that we wanted them to win and that we were back of them?

The spirit of the majority of the student body was that of blissful indifference and disinterested neutrality. We knew that we would be witnessing the field feats of Witter, Ford, and Worden for the last time. It was our duty to show them that we appreciated their spirit and efforts. They have battled and competed for us on the gridiron, in the basketball court, and on the field and track. They have won fame for their Alma Mater. They have been loyal enough to carry on straight through to the last fight of their college career. And we did not feel it worth our while to hold up our end of that last fight. Besides the warriors who leave us this year we had some other splendid champions on the field. They too did their share and more. Will they be encouraged to combat again next year? It is not for us to criticize them if they don't. Our attitude gave them the impression that we did not care whether they ran or didn't run. Is that attitude conducive to the maintenance of a good track team? Is it any credit to us to say that St. Bonaventure had nearly as many rooters as we did? Do we want our opponents and visitors to think that the lack of spirit shown on Friday is our customary display of enthusiasm? We know that the spirit of old A. U. is splendid. Why should we refrain from showing it? Were we treating our college and team white when we went on picnics or played golf, or strolled dreamily through Lover's Lane while Alfred's athletes strove to wrest a victory from the foe? No, we weren't. It is of little credit to most of us that we won the Meet. We owed it to ourselves, to our athletes, and to our Alma Mater to attend the last athletic contest of the season. It was decidedly worth our while to witness the magnificent action of Witter, Clark, and Perry in the long distance running; it was advantageous to view the efforts and results of our contestants in the broad jump and pole vault. Surely we should have found more satisfaction in upholding the honor of our college than in satisfying our own immediate desires and pleasures. It is to be lamented that at least half of the student body were content to leave the cheering and applause to the other half while all the joys and pleasures of strolling, of dreaming, and of picnicing were indulged in.

Then for the spirit of our athletes, for the honor of our Alma Mater, for the attitude of our visitors and rivals, and for our duty to ourselves we should see that the negligence of Friday afternoon is not repeated in the future. Let us see that Alfred's student body and faculty presents a better "showing" at the Meets and Contests of the coming year. Let's think it over and be prepared to give our fellows 100% support when they next appear to champion our cause. It's no more than their due and our duty. Shall we see that they get their just degree of approbation? What about it?

WHY STUDENTS SHOULD STAY TO COMMENCEMENT

All through exam week there comes this question to many students,—shall I stay to Commencement? or shall I go home with this bitter taste of exams still in my mouth?

Now there are lots of reasons why more than the usual meager handful of students should stay. First and foremost among them is this: until a student remains through Commencement week he simply does not realize the true meaning of loyalty to the Alma Mater. It takes a few days of watching the old graduates come back for reunions and visits to scenes of past glory to make him feel what a vital, tangible thing school spirit is. Many of these old grads have made their mark and are partly plutocrats. But all are intensely loyal to the school which mothered them.

During Commencement week the cares of studies are over. Every day is lazy day, filled with pleasure from beginning to end. The campus takes on a festive air—concerts, teas, receptions, out-door plays are happening all the while. Picnics and other out-door good times can go on, uninterrupted by studies or class bells. You have time to realize what an agreeable place is this school where you've spent a busy year.

For sheer enjoyment, for the pleasure you owe to yourself and the appreciation you owe to the University, stay in Alfred for Commencement week. You'll always be glad you did.

Our track team won the meet with St. Bonaventure. Why?—Certainly not because of the support it received from the student body. There were on the athletic field Friday afternoon perhaps fifty of the students and the faculty; perhaps seventy-five. Surely no more. Is this spirit? No. It is a positive disgrace.

We want athletics. We want a winning team. We want men to go down to the athletic field every afternoon, and go through a gruelling practice. We tell them to fight to the last. Some of them do fight until they fall headlong in the cinders. We ask them to do this for their Alma Mater. Yet when there is a meet some find that they prefer to loll about on a blanket or play golf, or get a couple of hours earlier start on a week-end visit, to cheering for their team.

What is the trouble? The only answer is that the majority of those who found something to keep them away from the Athletic field Friday afternoon are too selfish; too self-centered to even lend encouragement to those whom they ask to do what they themselves are too lazy and selfish to do.

If this is all the spirit that Alfred can show, let's give up Athletics entirely. Let us follow our natural bent and become a bunch of spineless, tea-sipping, parasitic lounge-lizards for unless we can forget self long enough to show spirit this is all for which we will ever stand.

Tradition is a force at some times more powerful than at others but never more so than in a college; there it is in the policy determining department of the enterprise....To be sure you know that. So do we all, all know it.

Our Alma Mater is worthy of the finest effort we can expend, not in one but in all directions, not now and then but always...Yes, and I am aware that you know that too.

Do we realize however that our unstinted devotion to our Alma Mater is a result of tradition? Does it often occur to us that loyalty to Alfred has grown to be a part of us because there have been others who loved it as we do? Most important of all, is the thought always in our minds that Alfred's future place in the eyes of the world is our care, that is, that we are the builders of tradition? I wonder.

We have been taught and we believe that a big A is one of the biggest things in Alfred. We hold that scholarship—not grubbing, pedantic erudition—but sound, vitalizing scholarship should be built into the very foundations of anything worthy of being called a life. We accept too Aristotle's dictum that man is a social animal; we accept it with avidity, swallow it untasted as it were, but do we digest it? Again, if permitted, I wonder.

Assuming that permission is granted, I wonder why it was that gate receipts were $10 at the St. Bonaventure meet when Alfred had a winning team. I wonder why it is so different for participants in all kinds of sport to find time to practice as diligently as—to the best of my recollection—other participants in other places but in the same old sports used to practice. I wonder why it is so difficult for many athletes to keep training. Is it possible that fellow students do not assist them to do so? This is to be sure a very remote contingency for we have been taught that an athlete's training schedule is his religion and we respect another's religion because it is his religion. There is much more in this chapter which you may write better than any one else; every man for himself is often fair enough.

As to the second article in our informal creed, what else can be said than that cuts are too numerous, study hours too few, and the tout ensemble far from what we hoped it might be? I am still tempted to wonder why it is and I wonder furthermore if the third article of the students' vademecum will throw any light on the question. Let me see.

The third article, you will recall, is directed against students possessed of anchorettical proclivities. Its reason for existence is indubitably quite valid but should its mere validity endanger the very life of the other points in the document? In other words, I wonder if the picnic schedule isn't perhaps a trifle heavy for some of us. I often wonder too why it is that students—I mean people who study, not what the word has come to mean in general—seem to prefer to do reading of a serious nature not in the library but elsewhere. Can it be that the library is used for other things that encroach upon the precincts of Minerva's preserve? There are here again many things which evoke my wonder, but I have finished.

Emphases are phenomena capable of as delicate adjustments as the triple valve on a super heater locomotive and I wonder if a little experimental adjustment of attitudes toward athletics, scholarship and the eternal feminine in favor of the two former much victimized tenets of the student's dialogue would come amiss. On second thought a radical change of sense of values would be better than an adjustment of emphases.

The author of these trivial wonderings is an ardent believer in the quoted adage of Aristotle that man is a social animal. He has furthermore for some time been a devotee of Horace who remarked on one of the many occasions when he said something:

...nunc et campus et areae Lenesque sub noctem susurri Composita repantantur hora.

THE GREEK PLAY

Plans for the forthcoming production of the Alcestis of Euripides at Commencement time are going on apace and the presentation promises to be even more interesting than the Hippolytus which was given last year. An attempt has been made to approximate the incidental music of the Greek stage and the rendering of the choral odes, for which music has been arranged by Ruth Stillman, will follow as closely as possible the practice of the ancient Hellenic theatre. The fact also that a raised stage will be dispensed with will bring the play nearer to the conditions under which Euripides first produced it at Athens over two thousand years ago. Specially designed terra cotta tickets will be used, the relief representing a scene from the play itself. The costumes and lightning have been carefully planned with due attention to archaeological detail and the scenery will be in keeping with the tone of the entire production.

If weather permits the play will be given out of doors in front of Alumni Hall on the evening of June 11, at 8 o'clock. In case of inclement weather however, an indoor presentation will be provided for. In either case the play is sure to be well received if past records of its career are an indication for it has been for centuries a universal favorite and still holds the boards in many places. The translation used is the version of Gilbert Murray, a man who has spent his life and his great talents as a poet in interpreting Euripides to the modern world. The cast which has been chosen from the students in the department of classics follows:

times only the mental characteristics of the dominant race are evident, leaving those of the lesser only in occasional members of the hybrid product. As a result the mixing of some races, is a benefit to humanity, whereas the mixing of others often has the opposite effect.

We are a nation of fused races and the benefit of fusion can clearly be seen. If the mentality of the races concerned are equal, the result will be beneficial and foster progress.

The address given by Mr. Oliviera was also a very interesting one. His subject was Chile, his native land. He gave a condensed history of the country, and a brief survey of its geography. He told of falacious views that are held by the people of the United States and Europe concerning South America, and explained how these views grew out of ignorance. He ended his address by telling how at the present time South America views the United States with suspicion, but that he hoped that in the future a more wholesome relationship would grow up.

COMMENCEMENT ORATION

Dr. Wheelock's home is in Albany and he is a close friend of Frobisher Lytle '21.

ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN BY THE CLASS IN FUNDAMENTALS OF SPEECH

That the selections were unhackneyed and were not the usual pieces dished up to patient audiences at public speaking contests were not the least enjoyable parts of the program.

That there was some forgetting of lines, some sing-singing, and some stiffness of posture was regrettable, of course. Nevertheless the performance is to be in general much commended. The affair, indeed, pretended to be but little more formal than an ordinary class recitation. Only those members participated who wanted the experience of talking to an audience.

In the last two or three years Alfred has all too much neglected the extremely useful field of public speaking. We are glad of the meritorious beginning. We wish that we may soon be privileged to listen to other programs given by Alfred College men and women.

ATHLETIC COUNCIL MEETING

The regular weekly meeting of the Athletic Council was held on May 25. It was voted to award John McMahon '23, Kenneth Holley '23, Robert Lyman '23, Paul Johnson '24, and Howard Griffith '24, their numerals.

SOPHS DOWN FROSH

The Sophs easily defeated the freshmen in their annual contest 21-2. There was nothing to the game. The Frosh couldn't hit Stryker, while the Sophs walloped Griffith's offerings to all corners of the lot.
