Choice of a Career
From the Yale News

THE NINETY-FOUR
Someone, probably an insurance agent, was quoted recently as saying that from the mass of one hundred college graduates one might only rise to the Polo and hunter class, perilously near the top of the financial ladder. Five others became comfortably off and found themselves after twenty years at the small yacht and chauffeur stage. The other ninety-four presumably congregate in the great section of the American people who drive their own Buicks to the golf club. In other words, dreaming about being a rich man is one thing, and making the grade in something else again.

Yet the ninety-four presumably work just as hard as the sumptuous six. Their business is the art of which a small and uninteresting world revolves. They have become directors of the dollar and that fickle desert, have nowhere else to turn. Jammed in a duel, straight out of business they can never leave the road and jump the fence into finer fields of life. This, then, is the portion of ninety-four men out of every hundred now on the campus.

The answer to the problem lies in the proper choice of a career.

Between now and Commencement, we shall have something to offer on the subject of "Careers."

 //very family manning a small flock of hens of a nondescript character, which for the most part pick up their own living, although a little grain is occasionally fed to them, in the vicinity of the great cities there is a use of country hens, large flocks, but in the whole the poultry business is still conducted in the same way it was hundreds of years ago.

With her rapidly increasing population, which is no longer held in check by the ravages of plague and famine, India is undoubtedly on its way to increase even further the production of her soil, as well as to extend her irrigation systems over a much wider territory than is now served by it, and it is with pleasure that many young men of the country are studying agriculture in the schools of different countries throughout the world.
