He Reached the Top

The Vice-President of a great life insurance company who began his career as an agent has this to say to seniors who are about to leave school and enter the business world:

"If you work hard and do your job, you will reap the rich rewards of success. Life insurance is a noble career. It is a field in which success is not limited by age or experience; but is determined by the individual's capacity to do the job. Life insurance is a profession which requires the highest standards of integrity.

"You will be given every opportunity to develop your talents and abilities, and you will be encouraged to become leaders in the industry. Life insurance is a profession which requires the highest standards of integrity.

"The rewards of success are not only financial, but they are also spiritual and moral. You will have the satisfaction of knowing that you are doing a good job, and that you are making a real contribution to society. Life insurance is a profession which requires the highest standards of integrity.

CHESS CLASS PENDING
The Alfred Chess Club members are urged to complete the present elmination play off before Wednesday in order that a team may be chosen to represent Alfred in the regional matches with Hobart and Buffalo.
Eight men will be chosen among the leading contestants and the four highest scoring among will constitute the team. The four men who are at present tied for first place are Boul brough, Finch, Pullen and Goldberg.
Each of four men play two games, and opponents are drawn by lots.
The matches are preceded by intensive practice and indications give promise of a successful run.
The chess club, composed of six members, matured this year, and considering the fact, much interest has been displayed thus far.
The rapidity matches take place on the last Saturday of every month, and the remainder in athletics.

How often the question arises, “How may I get the most out of my college life?” and how many of us are able to answer the question conclusively and satisfactorily? We are, as a rule, prone to believe in their part of their four years of college life

The scene between Touchstone and any Touchstone be more real? Here must be a character “Red” gave reality.
It is only in a few sections of the acts we do remember. The play, as a whole, lacked suspense. A man identified with our activities at Alfred for fifty years and one who has seen many of our dramatic efforts, admitted it wouldn’t hold him in suspense very much. “As You Like It” wasn’t the worst play we’ve had, because the old standbys gave it redeeming features, but surely it wasn’t by any means the best example of our old friends ability because many of the players couldn’t forget the bust and give all they had. In short of good out bad, it was too much a mixture.

The Shults brothers spent the week-end at their house.

Joseph Odelio is attempting the imitation of the famous movie actor, Charles Amberg, as Orinco, played a heavy part well.

There were times when he was not truly Orlando, but in general, his lines were given with a feeling for Shakespearean dictation.

John MacMahon as Jacques, was excellent, although not as good, the reviewer was told, as he had been at rehearsal.

He was careful to give his special scenes to his fellow-foresters, and not to the auditorium.

This minor part was made by Curtis Connors who sang the various roles of Asenades as if he were alone on the stage and had part of a real forest scene.

The minor parts were in general, well taken, but their virtues cannot be enumerated in detail. Elizabeth Taback as Audrey could barely have been bettered, and Ernest Eaton did good work as the rather quiet Oliver.

The dukes, Garnhart and Newell, were notable for their splendid voices.
