Ach, Vail, according to Dr. Harry Sandburg, held the thesis was extraordinarily interesting. A perusal of the thesis shows that Mrs. Vail became interested in the field of American literature and decided to write a thesis on the life of the writer.

Britain's spirit stands up in its finest hour

LONDON Winston Churchill told the people of Britain that they must expect "sweat and toil, blood and tears." And these goals have now become more certain than ever.

The night of Napoleon's air-power is now being headed for the island Kingdom. Highways of communications are suffering the losses of bombs.Islands are running down, and in the island landmarks in the east, invasion seems imminent that the British people realize the necessary Nazi attack from the west.

Britain's Madrid and Dictator Hymans' air raid bombs are unable to crush the spirit of men who are fighting for their homes and their liberties. The R.A.F. is taking a terrible toll of the enemy and the morale of Britain's men in the street plans for the defense of the realm.

This truery, despite the outcome, is Britain's finest hour.*—G.

FAUX PAS galore were on the order on the campus last week.

As is the custom, we pulled some of our friends. Our aim is stilts from humanism which happened at the opening of the Flat Look magazine. It was a large turnout that greeted us when we walked into the Flat office. We were not left in the dark.

As we made our way through the office, we turned and walked back. We thought of the time that they stood in the form of a large crowd, many of them in black capes and hoods, all wearing masks.

We were ushered in, and a note of farewell was introduced into the week's program of activities. One of the most important of these was the presentation of the Blue Key, which was given in honor of Chaplain James W. Locke, who is expected to return from his leave in the next few days.

Dr. Samuel Scholes, master of ceremonies, introduced the Blue Key. "It is a symbol of the highest ideals and aspirations of men who have dedicated their lives to the ideals of democracy."

The boys have written home for some orchestra music, and they are expected to arrive in Alfred later this week.

But, as in Madrid and Barcelona, the heavy blows of tons of bombs. Casualties are running down, and in the island landmarks in the east, invasion seems imminent that the British people realize the necessary Nazi attack from the west.

SAXONS FACE CORTLAND ELEVEN IN OPENER

Wadding

By Dan Watters

Cortland Normal looks on the Saxons horizon as a tough nut to crack. Reports from the early camp have it that the prospective physical education teachers pack plenty of weight and are outreared for hand."s

All things considered, the situation seems to add up to nothing but a "breather" start for the Sax and Grid. The only challenge that seems to point to a possible Alfond victory is the recent in the season's first game. But since 1936 when the ex-Purdue may be expected throughout the season. Whether or not interest in the series will be sustained after this week-end remains to be seen. The Saxons are looking forward to a tough battle with the victorious Cornells who return to the gridiron with a full complement of first-and-second-year men.

The Saxons' backfield, regarded as one of the strongest in the state, is girding for another panther attack. The ends, however, have been injured in recent games and will be replaced by veteran guards.

"You can't win against Cortland. They have a good backfield and a reputedly strong backfield and may be expected throughout the season. College Fun

President Tells Frosh

"College is work; college is fun; college is growth," Dr. J. Nelson Morrow, president of Alfred University, told the freshman class during Freshman Week as he described "So This Is College.

College also is buildings, gardens, excursions and a college is a home—of a great idea. It is all of this physical magnitude and more, for we do not go away from our homes as we do from college.

"We do not need necessarily to follow the lines, the goals, and the aims of our college, but college is work, fun, and growth, only the old familiar things.'

"Fathers and mothers will miss you. Mother will have to wash the dishes; father will have to mow the lawn and shovel the snow—do many things that you did—or did you?"

President Morrow said that when college is over, only the old familiar things remain.

New Experiences

"New experiences will come to you. More beautiful, more interesting, more abundant, more amazing, more meritorious; but they can only be the old familiar things.

"In opening the idea that college is work, fun, and growth, Professor Morrow pointed out that a college is no place for the fact that Alfred University has a complete education,' he stated.

"It might not be the cutting off of a foot and survive; that would be death. It might be the fact that Alfred University has a college without the academic. This is work, fun, and growth, only the old familiar things.'

"By Robert Williams '41

A mass of faces, strange names, unfamiliar things are some of the things which add to the bewildерment of the incoming freshmen.

"The first day of college makes everything very complicated and it seems as if one could never get on in this new system! "How will I ever get to know everybody else and find the new friends."
