Dewey Dedication Urges More Than Tools Alone for Grads.

Alfred Exhibits Draw Throught Industrial Day
In dedicating the new industrial building at Alfred last October 2, George Thomas E. Dewey, President of Alfred University, said: "It was not a word to be wasted by which students will be instructed, but with which they will be reminded."

The dedication ceremony was part of the "Industrial Day," which was the dedication and the closing of the fall semester education at Alfred University and the first day of the winter term.

The Governor included a word of warning in his speech. He advised students to prepare to work hard and to be ready for the next year. "We are growing young folks something which is not usually easy to teach," he said. "And now we must be ready to face the challenges of the future life."

Recalling the words of George B. Storrs, the Governor said that he was sure the graduates would be a source of pride to the students. "The quality of the words the students will use in the future will be determined by the quality of the education they received," he said.

The dedication ceremony was opened with prayers by the Rev. Dr. Dean D. Halsey, President of Alfred University, who said that the students were "inspired by the examples of those who have gone before them."

Clubs Incorporated Fencing

As the weather gets colder, there's a time for each sport, but it doesn't stop the thrill of a warm day, the stamp of an umpire's foot, or the joy of being on the court. The fencing club at Alfred University offers a unique opportunity to continue the fun and excitement during the winter months.

The club meets every Wednesday in the gym at 7:30 p.m., and members practice their skills with various opponents. The fencing equipment includes masks, foils, and epees, which are available for those who wish to participate. The club has a strong community of fencers who share their passion and dedication to the sport.

Snyder, Gilbert, Smith Lead Alf Harriers In Win

Last Friday the Saxon Cross Country team took a big step forward when Snyder, Gilbert, and Smith placed first through third in the University of Buffalo meet.

Ralph Snyder, who ran a 28:51 winning time, led the team off in the lead pack. All along the course Snyder kept pace with first place finisher, Pete Ramko. At the two mile mark Snyder was in the lead followed by Ramko and Bill Reddy. At the finish line Snyder had outpaced Ramko by about twenty yards. "At the beginning of the race I was in the lead pack for about a mile," Snyder said. "Ramko was in second place behind me. When we got to the mile mark I knew I had about a fifty yard lead. I just held on for the rest of it." Snyder also commented that Ramko was "covered" by him for the first mile of the race. "I didn't know anything about Ramko, but I knew he was in second place behind me at the beginning of the race." Snyder said that he was pleased with his performance. "I've been working on my running for the past six weeks and I think I'm really ready for the season." Snyder's time of 28:51 was the fastest time of the day and was over two minutes faster than the third place finisher, Pete Ramko. Snyder's performance was impressive, especially considering the cool and windy conditions at the race. The race was held on the University of Buffalo campus, which is known for its challenging terrain.

Another big winner in the meet was Gilbert. Gilbert, who ran a time of 29:32, finished third overall. Gilbert was pleased with his performance and said that he had been working hard to prepare for the season. "I've been training for the past few weeks and I'm really ready for the season," Gilbert said. "I'm pleased with my performance today. I think I could have done even better if the conditions were different." Gilbert's time of 29:32 was the second fastest time of the day and was over two minutes faster than the third place finisher, Pete Ramko. Gilbert's performance was impressive, especially considering the cool and windy conditions at the race. The race was held on the University of Buffalo campus, which is known for its challenging terrain.

The third big winner in the meet was Smith. Smith, who ran a time of 30:13, finished third overall. Smith was pleased with his performance and said that he had been working hard to prepare for the season. "I've been training for the past few weeks and I'm really ready for the season," Smith said. "I'm pleased with my performance today. I think I could have done even better if the conditions were different." Smith's time of 30:13 was the third fastest time of the day and was over two minutes faster than the third place finisher, Pete Ramko. Smith's performance was impressive, especially considering the cool and windy conditions at the race. The race was held on the University of Buffalo campus, which is known for its challenging terrain.

The team finished first overall with a total score of 24 points. The second place finisher was the University of Buffalo, who scored 29 points. The third place finisher was the University of Syracuse, who scored 34 points. The fourth place finisher was the University of Rochester, who scored 39 points. The fifth place finisher was the University of Albany, who scored 41 points. The sixth place finisher was the University of Connecticut, who scored 43 points. The seventh place finisher was the University of Maine, who scored 45 points. The eighth place finisher was the University of New Hampshire, who scored 51 points. The ninth place finisher was the University of Massachusetts, who scored 53 points. The tenth place finisher was the University of Rhode Island, who scored 55 points. The eleventh place finisher was the University of Vermont, who scored 57 points. The twelfth place finisher was the University of New York, who scored 60 points.
