Finnerty Selected by Varsity A Club For Senior Athlete of Year Award

by Allen Siegel
(Special to the FIAT LUX)

Flashy Frank Finnerty is Alfred's "Athlete of the Year."

A senior from Buffalo, Finnerty was selected for AU's top athletic award by the Varsity A Club at a meeting held last Tuesday.

His opening race for Alfred found him competing as a freshman on the varsity against a strong Syracuse cross country team. The date—October 1, 1955. The result—Freshman Frank Finnerty had his first collegiate victory, and broke a track record set by Russ Bradshaw of Colgate.

As a freshman, he was State one-mile king. Since that time he picked up the half mile honors and the cross country kingship. The latter title came in '56 as he broke the record and led the AU team to its first State championship since '51.

One of his busiest days came on a Saturday during his freshman year. Running in a dual meet against Buffalo State at Alfred, Finnerty ran the two mile record victory, a gym mark which still stands. He then anchored a winning relay team and hopped onto a bus, traveled to Hobart and played a full forty minutes of basketball as starting guard with the Saxon yearlings.

Listing his marks would present an endless string. He holds two all-time University records, two outdoor track marks, three interclass and one other gym record, the top two cross country times ever recorded by an AU performer in the IC4A's, the University cross country standard and a record on just about every track he has run on.

This summer two professor, Dr. Frederick C. Engelmann and Dr. Manolo Rodriguez-Diaz will teach summer courses at Cornell University and the University of Puerto Rico respectively.

Dr. Frederick C. Engelmann will serve as associate professor in Cornell University's Department of Government this summer.

During the summer session—July 6 to August 15—he will teach comparative government, which is one of the lower division courses on the under graduate level, and political parties which is an upper division course including American parties, state parties, and politics in general.

Dr. Engelmann stresses that aside from the teaching of the actual classes, he hopes to gain valuable assistance in his coming Austrian project from Dr. David Spitz who will be his associate at Cornell.

Dr. Spitz plans to complete the work on his volume concerning the theory of democracy which will tie in with Dr. Engelmann's coming work. Englemann also plans to make use of the Cornell library's extensive section dealing with Austria.

Professor Rodriguez-Diaz will leave June 10 for Puerto Rico, where he will teach a summer course for graduate students in Educational Administration.

Farewell

This is the last issue of the FIAT LUX this school year. We will resume publication in the fall.

The editors and staff would like to take this opportunity to wish everyone a happy vacation. Hope to see you in the fall...

From the Editors... To the new "alumni"...

The academic year 1958-59 is now drawing to a close. Within a few weeks finals will be completed, books packed away and undergraduates will leave for the summer.

For you seniors the last undergraduate activities will be finished and you will be making preparations for Commencement—the commencement of a new way of life for which you have been preparing during your four years at Alfred.

The college degree which you will receive implies that you are an educated person; this is, you have gained "something" as a result of four years at college. This "something" is more than just schooling or being connected with the educative process. To be educated means you have given something of yourself to this educative process and in return have been enriched with knowledge and the qualities of responsibility and leadership.

Your college degree implies that you are this kind of an educated person. It carries the connotation that you have learned to accept responsibility, that you have developed qualities of leadership, and that during your years in college you have had the opportunity to cultivate your latent talents and aptitudes to their highest level.

Opportunities for such development have been yours during your undergraduate years. May you look back over your college career with the satisfied feeling that you took advantage of the opportunities Alfred has offered and may you fulfill the implications which your degree will connote.

With this degree you will go into the "world" to begin a new life—a world where you have expectations of a good future, including economic security, personal happiness, and an opportunity to work for the betterment of your community. As an educated person, you must also meet certain expectations of society. Among these are the use of those qualities of responsibility and leadership which were developed during college and are signified by the degree which you will hold.

The staff of the FIAT LUX extends to the members of the Class of 1959 sincere congratulations as you graduate and wishes you "gluck auf" as you join the ranks of Alfred's alumni.

Dr. Spitz Gives Talk: Topic Is Democracy

by FIAT LUX Staff Member

Dr. David Spitz spoke to the Political Science Club on the problems of integrating freedom and democracy last Tuesday evening.

There are two problems with which we must cope, said Spitz. One is in defining the word freedom. The second is how to resolve democracy and freedom, for if a majority rules, restraints will necessarily be placed on the minority.

"No man or society really believes in freedom," Spitz explained that freedom is a "god-word," it is something in which we must pretend to believe. We identify that which we believe (which is not freedom) with freedom.

There are several misconceptions held concerning freedom. One is that it is something entire. Patrick Henry said "Give me liberty or give me death." But, Spitz asked, what about the slaves, Henry's statement concerns himself, it is a purely selfish attitude. It is necessary to have some freedoms and some restraints. Man must make a choice of particular liberties.

Spitz's definition of true freedom is the absence of restraints. He believes, however, that no one really wants this as it leads to evil. What is important is man's belief in justice or virtue. He is free when he acts according to what he believes is right and what he feels he ought to do.

Democracy, said Spitz, requires the freedom of man to express conflicting ideas. Perhaps the best expression of democracy is Lincoln's statement, "As I would not be a slave, so I would not be a master."

Spitz explained that democracy is the substitute of a peaceful resolution for a violent one. It is a commitment to a method whereby men can resolve their difficulties, it is not an end in itself.

Men are created equal and should be allowed to express themselves whether right or wrong. Democracy makes it possible to correct the wrong ideals. For this reason a democratic state always lives in a state of crisis.

A question and answer period followed Dr. Spitz's talk.

English Panel Reviewed Major Victorian Works

by Emmalyn Heed

Faculty members of the English Department held a panel discussion on four major literary works of the Victorian period last Thursday afternoon in conjunction with the Fine Arts Festival.

The year 1859 was the high point of the Victorian period in Great Britain. It was a year of great literary activity. And it was a time when the English man turned to books as a means of escape from the pessimism that shadowed his country.

MacDonald began the discussion by reviewing Darwin's "Origin of Species." He explained that as a product of the scientific mind the work is worth as much in 1959 as it was in 1859. Darwin stands unchallenged today although we have gone on beyond him. Loss of interest in the twentieth century is due to the fact that evolution is now generally accepted by most people.

Finch and Bernstein discussed John Stuart Mill's "On Liberty." Finch explained that it is a defence of individualism and what happens to it in a democracy. Mill asks for complete freedom of speech and opinion in the rationalist tradition. Bernstein explained that it is difficult to resolve this nineteenth century view with twentieth century society. One man can hardly argue against the mass media by which he is dominated today.

Bernstein explained that the Rubaiyat suffers from its fame because too many people know it too well and thus it loses meaning.

The final book to be discussed was "Adam Bede" by George Eliot. O'Hara explained that Eliot was unorthodox as a Victorian and is considered the first modern English novelist. She was Wordsworthian in her desire for ordinary realism. Eliot's work is also important for its psychological exploration of the characters. The panel discussed the objectivity of "Adam Bede" and its religious allusions. It is modern for its viewpoint that each man has a right to his own faith.

Finch summed up the talks by explaining that despite the differences of the four works, basically each one is concerned with the issue of freedom.

Prof. Ray W. Wingate to Celebrate 22nd Year As Carillonneur At Alfred

by FIAT LUX Staff Member

Professor Ray W. Wingate, Alfred's first and only carillonneur has been playing the bells on campus for twenty-two years.

"The carillonneur is the Rocky Marciano of the music world," claims Wingate. He must have stamina and be fast and sure with his hands and feet. He should practice four hours a day on the clavier, an instrument containing xylophone plates, and compose six hours a day. The carillonneur has no music written for him previously. Wingate has made more than 62,000 arrangements.

The carillonneur must be a mechanic as well as a musician. When anything goes wrong Wingate grabs his tools and ascends to the top of the tower to make repairs. If a wire snaps during a concert he must transpose his music to a new key quickly. Even a four degree temperature change tends to make a difference in the tone of the bells.

The priceless Davis Memorial Carillon was dedicated on Alfred's campus in 1935. The forty-three bells were purchased by alumni and friends to honor former president of Alfred, Booth Colwell Davis and his wife. The largest bell is approximately two tons, the smallest eight pounds.

Eighteen of the bells were cast in 1674 Amsterdam by Peter Hemony, City Founder of Bells and Cannons. They were brought here by Dr. Watson from an old disintegrated castle. Sixteen bells are from the foundry of Joris Dumery and date 1737.

Wingate came to Alfred in 1912 as instructor in vocal music and glee club director. He had been vacationing in Rhode Island when President Norwood, of the University called him on the phone. "You are going to play our carillon." "But I'm a vocalist," exclaimed Wingate. He came to Alfred immediately, knowing very little about the carillon.

Wingate, who is seventy-two years old, studied in Ottawa and the Riverside Church in New York. He has declined a permanent appointment at Niagara Falls, Ontario. "I don't want to leave my Alfred bells," he said. The only company he has in the bell tower while performing is his wolfhound, Chiga.

Oedipus Production Is Footlight Finale

by Barbara Broudy

The presentation of Greek tragedy affords a difficult problem to any group of players. Add to this the challenges of verse dialogue and theatre-in-the-round production and you are faced with the three colossal obstacles that confronted the Alfred Footlight Club in their presentation of 'Oedipus at Colonus.' Yet the choice of play, if a difficult one, was compelling; the attempt, if found wanting in spots, was commendable.

Closest to achieving in acting this peak to which Roche aimed his translation, was Joanne Wendover in her characterization of Antigone. Eloquent in speech or silence, Miss Wendover communicated to the audience a real Antigone.

Glen Van Ingen as Oedipus overcame the physical obstacle of his height and the technical one of lengthy speeches in verse. As a character, he came to life during the animated argument with Creon, portrayed competently by Jerome Reicher. Though Mr. Van Ingen's feeling for the metered verse was ineffectual, he achieved, through his movements and forceful speeches, a greater stature by the close of the play.

Kin gTheus, acted by Dickson Shaw, was every inch a king — again, despite his height. Mr. Shaw added to the aura of Greek drama by possessing the dignity, humanity and sensitivity of kingly action. Grace Bookheim as Antigone's sister Ismene offered a picture of prettiness and simplicity sans Greek loftiness. Mr. Chororos' portrayal of Polyneices, son of Oedipus, was a lively one, but too conscious of an accented verse and too rapid to achieve a poignancy. The chorus of Mrs. Serxner, Berkowitz and Siegal sporadically reached heights reminiscent of movements and dialogue by professional players, but at times lapsed into mere recitation.

Credits to the entire Footlight Club for an unusually difficult challenge, well met.

Four A. U. Students to Attend Washington Semester Course

This year AU will send four students to study the American government in action through the Washington Semester program. Those selected to attend this program are Gail Kelts, Olyce Mitchell, Ronda Shaner, and Michael Jaffee.

Those selected will study in Washington for one semester under the auspices of American University. The students will study under a program in which different government officials will lecture and answer questions. A field seminar on American National Government in Action is held three times a week.

Some thirty governmental, professional and educational leaders of the Washington area compose the Community Advisory Committee which serves in an advisory capacity throughout the year, as well as hearing reports from the participating students. At the end of the semester each student will turn in a term project on a subject dealing with American Government and its relations with the American people.

Last year AU sent Judy Fairbank, Barbara Broudy and Brian Rodgers as the representatives. Students that are part of this plan are chosen from colleges and universities from all over the United States.

Thinclads Retain State Crown As Finnerty Wins Two Events

by Allen Siegal
(Special to the FIAT LUX)

TROY—One-seventh of a point was enough to give the Saxons of Alfred University their second State track championship in as many years.

Down by one point with but a single event left, the Saxon tracksters came through with a relay victory to gain the crown again. The final score found AU with 48 11-14 points, nipping Hamilton with 48 9-14 points and well ahead of Ithaca with 22 9-14 and Union with 22.

"Athlete of the Year" Frank Finnerty led the Alfred point parade and added another laurel to his growing collection as he was selected the outstanding meet competitor while gaining a double in the mile and the half mile and then anchoring the victorious mile relay.

Two other Saxons gained individual laurels. Steve Kelley retained his broad jump crown as he sailed 22' 11 1/4" to win the event for the second consecutive year. Senior Don Ulmer picked up the remaining Saxon first as he raced to a 51.1 victory in the quarter mile event.

Finnerty took the mile in 4:17.5 with Saxon Larrie Sweet coming home second. The half mile saw Finnerty win in 1:54.7 with Sweet again picking up second place points. Sweet was timed in 1:55.

Kelley, in addition to his broad jump crown, picked up a fifth in the century and tied with Bob Clark for third in the high jump. Clark took fifth in the broad jump.

In the two-mile run Charlie Williams and Carl Blanchard gave the

1959 New York State Track and Field Champions

Alfred team the four and five spots, while Steve Cohen and Dick Hennon tied for the five spot in the high jump.

Skip Conwicke gave the Purple and Gold cause four points for second in the javelin while Herm Lederberg had the fourth position in the shot. This set the stage for the day's final event.

The mile relay found Alfred trailing Hamilton with the outcome of this race deciding the championship. Alfred had to place one place higher than Hamilton in the event or relinquish the crown.

The Blue and White foursome took the second spot, but that wasn't enough. The quartet of Don Ulmer, Larrie Sweet, George Glaess and Finnerty took the win and the championship for Alfred. Taking an early lead in the event the team was never headed and Finnerty's 49.9 quarter wrapped it up with a 15 yard win.

The cindermen close out their season this Saturday when they
