Horowitz Re-elected As Mayor - Discusses Goals for Next Term

By Joan Reithstein

Gary Horowitz, professor of History at Alfred University, stated his plans after winning a landslide victory over his sole opponent, Seth Rosenthal, in Alfred's March mayoral election.

Lifted

The two-week ban on Alfred University students at the Ag. Tech. pub has been lifted. The ban resulted from a fight which erupted at the pub on February 22nd. The ban was from Feb. 24th to March 7th. Jay Gleeson, manager of the Ag. Tech. pub, at the time of the fight resigned. He had been fired for "having friendly relations with A.U. and Ag. Tech."

Pulos Honored by State Association For Mental Health

The New York State Association for Mental Health has awarded its highest honor to Alfred University faculty member for 28 years of "meritorious service in the field of volunteer mental health."

Dr. William L. Pulos, professor of education at Alfred and former president of the state mental health association, was presented with a bronze bell at the group's winter meeting last month in Albany.

By Linda A. Carl

Pulos served for two terms as president of the association and is currently a member of the board of directors of the National Association for Mental Health. Both organizations act as information clearing houses and advocates for mental health causes.

According to Dr. Wilford Miles, Dean of the Business and Administration School, this part of a University attempt to devise more ways for students to do a better job of tailoring their educations to fit their own needs and demands: minors shall be forthcoming from other schools.

Dr. Robert Heineman, Chairman of the Division of Social Sciences and Anne Kulander were also elected to serve as Trustees. This is Mayor Horowitz’s third term as mayor. The Democratic Party spent $40 on the campaign.

Last month, three Alfred University students went to Atlanta, Georgia, for their final presentation in the 1977 Intercollegiate Business Game, sponsored by Emory University.

It was the culmination of a month of twelve-hour work days and business decisions. The final scores have not been tallied yet, but it is known that Alfred did not place first or second.

Dr. Robert Heineman, Dr. Dave Terwilleger, and Regina Bennett, were selected by the faculty in the School of Accounting with the towns of Andover and Almond to talk about associates need. Another concern is the parking situation in the village. "There is no room to speak of at this point. We’ve been looking into the possibility of public transportation to Borell and Welleslie, especially for the elderly," said the Mayor. "We’re also thinking of renovating Village Hall and some of the old buildings in town. They’re a valuable part of history and some of the buildings are falling into disrepair.

Business to Be Offered to Non-Business Majors Next Fall

Twelve Three Faculty Promoted or Granted Tenure

Promotions, changes of title and other personnel actions at Alfred University have been announced by the President, Dr. Richard B. Howard. In the University’s School of Business and Administration, Dr. William D. Biggs has been promoted from instructor to assistant professor of accounting; John C. Howard from instructor to assistant professor of business administration; and Dr. Savo J. Jevremovic from associate professor of economics.

The final scores have not been tallied yet, but it is known that Alfred did not place first or second.

Business to Be Offered to Non-Business Majors Next Fall

By Linda A. Carl

Starting next year, the School of Business and Administration will be offering minors in Accounting, Economics, Finance, Management, Marketing and General Business to all University students. According to Dr. Wilford Miles, Dean of the Business and Administration School, this is a part of a University attempt to devise more ways for students to do a better job of tailoring their educations to fit their own needs and demands: minors shall be forthcoming from other schools.

Dean Miles said that these new minors aim at the natural outgrowth of curricular development, and faculty growth has reached a stage which permits the Business School to be more responsive to student needs other than business majors. He also said that more and more students are showing vocational interests and these minors would satisfy the students who desire a taste of business.

"Each of these minors has taken a major area of endeavor and give the student strong academic preparation to function in that field," said Miles. He went on to say that the only exception is the General Business minor which is designed for those who think they will have to make a living but don’t know kinds of things they want to do. A student could start in The General Business minor and with "reasonable ease" switch into another business minor. Miles said, "We think it is a fine program and that the best minors I’ve ever seen."

Most of these Business minors are very strong, go into advance courses and require a two or three and a half years to complete the minor. Miles feels the key to taking the courses is deciding early enough to start in the freshman or sophomore year, certainly no later than the beginning of the junior year.

Dean Miles hopes that not only will students avail themselves of the business offerings, but also that the business students will take advantage of minors offered in the other schools.

In other activities, Pulos is currently serving on a 30-member task force charge with reviewing financial procedures for New York’s mental health programs. The task force was named by Dr. Lawrence C. Kolb, state Commissioner of Mental Hygiene.

Student Government

By D. Scott Schlegel

Last Thursday night’s student government meeting, the second since Bob Cahn and Mark Brostoff took office, was the most poorly attended of the semester and possibly the year.

Of 25 senators, only 14 attended the meeting, one of whom arrived 10 minutes late. No votes were taken because more than half of the senate body must be present at the meeting for any vote to be taken.

After the last week’s minutes were read, Ken Freeman read a proposal from the Committee for Instructional Improvement (CII) for a $200 grant as a reward to faculty who have shown innovative and creative methods of instruction in the opinion of student government. Bill Pajou, an off-campus senator suggested that student government match the grant. No vote was taken on the proposal, which was tabled until next week.

Mark Brostoff announced that 8 senators will be dismissed from the senate for failing to attend 3 meetings. These senators represent the following fraternities: Kappa Psi, which has never been represented at a Senate meeting, according to Mark Brostoff, Cannon, Shults, Teddinick, Athena, A. Davis C. ZBT, Norwood F.

Brossost said that new senators would be elected by next week’s meeting. Cahn announced that he and Brostoff spoke with President Rose to discuss the extension of library hours for the entire semester instead of only during exam times. They said that Rose was in favor of the idea.

Other announcements made were: voting for students to sit on various University committees will be discussed next week and there will be an informal gathering held for all members of student government at President Rose’s house during an event in the end of May.

Cahn told senators that he had spoken with Dean Barker and she would like to discuss the student government proposal for a Nursing Advisory Board. Though no nurses were present at the meeting, the elected senators to “talk it up among other senators” because he didn’t want to meet with Dean Barker and have to say, “well, we’re just planning it.”

The proposal for a WALF Day was discussed but no vote was taken due to lack of senators. The proposal calls for student government funds to pay for beer which would be free to students in front of the campus center and other locations. The festival will be held on a Saturday within the next month.

A discussion of whether or not to change the time of student government meetings to another time of the evening took place. No decision was made.

Driftwood Speaks on Music of the Ozarks

By Janet Lawrence

“Folk Music of the Ozarks” was the topic of the Bergren Forum, on Wednesday, March 16th in the Parent’s Lounge, given by Jimmy Driftwood.

“I became interested in preserving the music of the Ozarks...” said Driftwood, as he explained the history of the Ozarks, his family, and how they crossed the Mississippi amidst 10,000 Indians and trappers. The first settlers left their trunks behind, like Driftwood whose organ was too tough to carry. “It was a trail of tears.”

Driftwood plays on an 110 year-old guitar that once was his grandfather’s. “I don’t play like no one else...” he explained as he played the notes from a jingle player uses his thumb... explained the musician. In the “old days,” they called dulcimers, Harmonicas, and Harmonicas, French Harps. People use to play how against their cheeks to create vibrations. “Everyone used to bang those bows when I was a boy”, said Driftwood.

After Driftwood was born and his parents brought him back to their house, Jimmy’s grandfather wrapped a piece of driftwood up and gave it to his grandmother. The grandmother rocked it until 20 minutes later, she realized it was not the baby but driftwood. Thus, he explained he was given the name called Jimmy Driftwood.

Give Up a Meal

Give-up-a-meal, Student Volunteers for Community Action’s annual fund raising event, will be held on Thursday, April 21st. Student Volunteers for Community Action is a student run, service organization which sponsors such programs as Adopt-a-Youth and Adopt-a-Grandparent. Much of the money to run these programs is obtained from the proceeds of Give-Up-a-Meal.

Through the generosity of Paul Zarogian and the Saga Food Service, Student Volunteers will receive a percentage of the cost of each dinner not eaten on April 21st. Many of the stores in Alfred will be giving discounts to students who give up their dinners that night.

Members of Student Volunteers for Community Action will be canvassing both Brick and Ade Dining Halls this week to sign people up to participate in Give-Up-a-Meal. All interested students must sign an agreement to forego this meal in order for SVCA to receive the contributions for their dinners.

So, take advantage of the opportunity to eat out and help Student Volunteers by giving up your dinner on April 21st. Thanks.

Dr. Doug Johnson of the Alfred University Psychology Department spoke on the controversy surrounding the Decline of Intelligence with Age at the March 30th Bergren Forum.

"Are the Young Smarter Than the Old?"

By Roberta E. Nordheim

Dr. Doug Johnson of the Alfred University Psychology Department spoke on the controversy surrounding the Decline of Intelligence with Age at the March 30th Bergren Forum.

Intelligence tests are hocus-pocus used by psychologists to prove their clients stupid and themselves brilliant was a satiric quote given by Dr. Johnson to open the Forum. The merits of IQ testing are often questioned, he went on to say; often the testers create nothing more than a We-are-smarter-than-they test.

The first biased use of intelligence testing—something originally developed to predict scholastic performance in children—was as a method of screening immigrants. Frequently these people could not speak the language the test was written in, and were hence at a great disadvantage.

Age differences and IQ differences are the current concern. It is believed that intellectual performance declines with age has been held in the past," said Johnson. Early research supported that belief. However, in recent studies it has been found that as often intellectual performance declines, it improves.

The studies performed were of two general types: longitudinal, which tests one subject during childhood, youth, middle-age and old age; and cross-sectional, which tests young and old people at the same time.

Sometimes the cross-sectional tests could be biased in favor of the young—the when they are lined up (older people, on the average, some who slower though not less capable, than the young) or when they are administered by computer the elderly may not be familiar or comfortable with a computerized environment, and this inhibits their performances, he said. Cross sectional testing has been used longer than longitudinal for reasons of practicality—because of the possible biases in these "situational determinants" not all of it may be valid.

One idea which relates to decline of intellectual performance is the terminal drop hypothesis. This states that there is a great decrease in intelligence directly before the subject's death. Therefore, a sudden and drastic drop in IQ is predictive of death. Johnson stated that this hypothesis may be valid, but that a system which has become terminal would, in becoming terminal, produce good performance.

According to Johnson, the long-held (and still widely accepted) belief that aging in a pathological way would render invalid any test which showed an improvement in the intellectual functioning of the aged. "This society is evolving into a caste system based on IQ," said Johnson, "an elitist system based on acquired rather than ascribed (inherent at birth) characteristics may not be inappropriate," he added.

What Does Financial Exigency Mean?

It has been brought to the attention of the Fiat Lux that one of the terms we have been using may have serious and incorrect implications. This term, "financial exigency", has legal implications that are different from its literary meaning.

Alfred University has never declared financial exigency. It has, however, justified its retrenchment move and by calling it a result of "Financial Considerations Related to a Fiscal Emergency". We are confused as to the difference between the two terms. There is no difference according to the dictionary, but dictionaries do not define legal terms. (We'd like to suggest that the legal profession is murdering the English language by applying their own contrived meanings to words, but that's another story.) Just what is the legal difference between the two terms?

Provost Odle will attempt to answer this question in the next issue of the Fiat Lux. There are some side issues that have been raised along with the definition of the terms that we hope he will also address. Is there any difference in the steps that the University can legally take to dismiss tenured faculty if there is a difference in the two terms? And how do the terms relate to Alfred University in past, present and future policies?

Issues related to these questions have been addressed before, but it is the hope of the Fiat Lux that all the technical loose ends will be wrapped up on this issue in our next publication.

Ban Unfair

The recent Tech Pub ban on University students was an unfair one. When an entire group of people must be punished for the actions of only a few, something is wrong. It is something that is as unfair and as unprofitable for the Tech Pub to ban 1,900 A.U. students when only a handful were involved.

To the Fiat:

We were pleased to see the article on the Gay Center in the Fiat Lux (March 7). The article will hopefully have made the Alfred Community, both gay and straight, aware of who we are and what we offer.

There is, however, one correction to be made. While the facilities given us need some repairs, the University has cooperated when we have requested them. The responsibility for the problems which rest on the gay community of Alfred.

Studies show one out of every ten persons is gay. Allowing for the homophobic peculiarities of Alfred, in spite of the town's Gay Rights Ordinance, we estimate only one of every twenty in gay. What is needed is the time and energy of just a fraction of this minority. The regular members of the center put in as much time and work as their studies allow.

To the Fiat: Dear Editor,

This letter is in no way referring to or connected with the editor between pro and anti-freedom supporters. It is 4:00 a.m. Tuesday and it is just one more night of many numerous ones that I have been waking up this year by Delta Sig asking if I wanted to bite their heads off, when do they think they've got something so extraordinary? Why do they feel that the student body at Alfred desires this part of their anatomy? Many they've seen it before, but just can't deal with it so they've asked for a milder version. The truth is I don't really care and I wish as many others do they'd stop asking.

Do you feel confident with the health facilities at Alfred University?

Rich: I don’t think the doctor is that bad, or the nurses are that bad, but I don’t think they have the facilities to handle emergencies.

Maria: I myself have only had positive experiences with the health care facilities, but I have heard so many derogatory statements that now I am afraid.

Barry: I’ve had no problems with them.

Kari: Yes, because every time I’ve gone there they’ve taken care of me, and given me free throat medicine.

Pat: Not at all, I have had only bad experiences.

Giving It All Away

By David L. Green

Recently the Student Financial Aid Office began awarding aid for the summer and coming academic year. Those of you who have already received your award notices probably never gave much thought to how your individual award packages were developed. Perhaps you thought that after your financial need had been determined through the use of the PCS or FFA formula, that a few mystical rites were performed and your individual awards appeared. Well there really is some method in our madness. This article should give you an insight into what types of things are considered when your application is reviewed.

First, and foremost, a financial need must be demonstrated. And as most of you are aware, this is accomplished through the use of the PCS (Parents’ Confidential Information Statement) or the FAF (Financial Aid Application Form) formula. OK. Now that you have demonstrated a need, what then? Well, then I look at your academic record—Cum and previous semester’s GPA for the returning applicant, or the high school record for incoming students. Those students with the better academic scores will get priority consideration for what A.U. Grant-in-Aid money available allows. Those students with the lower scores will be asked to rely more heavily on work and loans (probably bank loans rather than National Direct Student Loans or Federal Perkins Loans). Students on disciplinary probation will not be allowed to receive any funds through the Student Financial Aid Office. Money is available through outside sources such as BEOG, TAP, etc.

After your grades, I look at the type of aid in which you indicated an interest. Top priority for everyone, of course, is for scholarships or grants. But the thing I really look at is your second choice: whether you have indicated a loan, and/or work, and if so, your order of preference. If you did not indicate loan as a choice then I will probably not award you work because you probably would not work anyway. An exception to this would be for those who are asked to rely on “SELF-HELP” (loans and work) because of their poor grades.

Now that this has been accomplished, I look at the types of aid that you apply for. Amounts received in previous years and try to continue you on the same types unless you indicated you were unhappy with them. If the need is the same or greater than the previous year, then I try to keep the amounts similar, if not more than before.

Maybe this dissertation has confused me more than helped you. I'll be the first to admit that.

E.J. SEZ:

You’ve seen this sign in a barroom, “Too soon we get old and too late we get smart.” How true, particularly for car-eucassettes, and particularly car-eucassettes. I think it’s made so much noise that it drowned out the hiss produced by the tape. The mezzo: don’t buy cheap tapes for cars—buy the best. I’ve got a hot deal on 30 minute cassette tapes for cars—buy the best. I’ve got a hot deal on 30 minute cassette tapes—TDK SARK for $27.50, regularly $49.00.

Are you still murdering albums? Please get a Discwasher and/or a new needle (or cartridge). Remember, a needle is only good for less than 100 hours of play for the cheapies and maybe 200 hours if you’ve been good and kept your albums immaculate.

Sanyo has a front-loading cassette tape deck that is fantastic. For the money, you just can’t beat it. Lists for $200, I sell it for $150. It has everything—good plays, speed-control back-cue cassette decks in the price class never have this feature). Dolby, a timer (will record programs off the air while you are away). It’s a great deck and I can’t praise it enough.

I’ve taken on a new line of stereo equipment—OPTONICA—beautiful stuff with reasonable prices. The cassette deck is worthy of mention. It can be programmed to select any song on a cassette tape and the machine will select it for you. This machine is a dream and going forward until you find the right song. And the sound coming out of this deck is just beautiful. The volume makes you feel like you are inside the music. You’ll be amazed.

Keep an ear out for new and improved cassette tape decks that are better than ever. Your money will be well spent.

Sanders Pleased With Saxons' Attitudes

By Gary Esterow

Coach Sam Sanders will be taking over this season for Alex Yunevich, who retired after coaching for 36 years. He will be inheriting a team that finished the 1976 season with a 5-2-2 record.

On Monday, March 14, Coach Sanders held a meeting with his players. Over 50 people attended. Coach Sanders gave each one a questionnaire and asked them to rate themselves. He said, "I was very encouraged with their attitude. They all rate themselves as wanting to play." Sanders is in the process of hiring his assistant coaches for next season. Two of last year's assistants, Robert Copeault, offensive back, and James Bassage, defensive end and Frank Vorito, offensive receiver, who will be working on their masters.

Last season, the Saxons were plagued by an inconsistent offense. One of Coach Sanders' objectives is to establish a little more offense. He said, "I would like to get the offense off to a good start next season."

One of Sam Sanders main objectives is to maintain the football tradition, here at Alfred. He said, "We will play one game at a time. The team, myself, and my coaches will prepare for each game and do the best we can."

Sanders is currently employed by both Alfred and Lehigh. His contract ends with Lehigh in June. He is recruiting for both schools. He is in the process of trying to get some players for the Saxons.

"Football is a complete game. There must be a balance between the offense and defense if the team is to be successful," he said. Sanders added, "I want to be at a position to work with both the offense and defense. I want to have close contact with all my coaches."

Judging by the enthusiasm shown by his players at their March 14 meeting, Sam Sanders should have a very competitive team and improve on last year's record.
