University plans new capital campaign
Second fund drive will expand endowment funds

Remodeling the Steinheim and adding to the University's endowment will be priorities of a new capital campaign, President Edward G. Coll Jr. said. The new campaign will follow in the footsteps of a recently completed five-year campaign that netted $65.4 million.

"It can only have a heavy emphasis on the endowment," Coll said, "but I think it is absolutely the right thing to do." said Christine Groatowski, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

"The difference between an institution that has an excellent education and an institution like Swarthmore that also gives an excellent education is that Swarthmore can afford to keep on doing it," Groatowski said.

Coll agreed, saying, "We simply don't have enough to finance the kind of future we want for this place." The University is currently $31 million, said Abderrahman.

---

Heating pipe bursts in Openhym over break

AU students didn't express much concern when they came back from winter break to find their rooms smelling odd and their possessions damaged after a pipe carrying water for the heating system froze and burst.

"I opened my door, and found my posters on the floor, wet," said resident Karen Vogan. "The blankets on the bed had cellophane all over them, and they smelled musty."

She expressed concern over the fact that a one-of-a-kind piece of artwork that could have been sold was now destroyed. But Vogan said she was not bitter. "Stuff like that happens," she said.

AU offered to replace valuables and gave $50 to students whose rooms were damaged by water. The University will also reimburse students who replace damaged items.

Another resident, Debbie Nall, said, "They cleaned the carpet. It wasn't that bad. My clothes got ruined, and my shoes have red dye on them. It smells like mold, and there are yellow stains on my clothes. I can't get them out." She also said there was water under her roommate's bed and water spots on the floor.

Another resident said only his rug was ruined. "They called my mom at home and told us the pipe was broken," said Justin Phillips. "And they'd do what they can." He said the phone call came one week before students returned to campus.

Bill Dillon, the director of physical plant, said, "The pipe broke because water flow was restricted in that circulation loop of the Openhym heating system. Without flow, there was no heat." The water froze, the pipe burst and rooms flooded.

To ensure that pipes won't freeze in the future, Dillon said, "We're developing mechanical procedures that would reduce risk." Dillon also said there would not have been a pipe break if people had occupied the living quarters.

"If no one is using the facility, temperatures in the water pipes fall and accidents can happen," he said. Durkin came back from break to find his art supplies and portrait destroyed. He said, "It's not a big deal.

But Durkin had one surprise waiting for him. "I came in to the room and everything was different. It was cleaned up, the beds were made, and stuff was rearranged," he said.

Durkin said he would not sue AU or tell his parents of the situation because it would be "something else they would have to worry about." He said his belongings weren't worth much and "it costs more to get new stuff than what my stuff is originally worth."

Durkin said he felt lucky because his stereo wasn't damaged. "I'm just not going to leave anything worth that in the room anymore," he said.

AU seeks honor of society

Undaunted by two previous rejections, the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences applied again last November for a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, the highly selective national liberal arts honor society.

Faculty familiar with the project said AU could hear from the Society as early as February, adding that the University's prospects seemed promising this year.

Arthur L. Grell, professor of sociology and a member of Phi Beta Kappa, said the College's foreign language requirement should put AU over the top.

"Phi Beta Kappa has criticized us in the past for not ensuring that our liberal arts students can demonstrate proficiency in a foreign language," Grell said. "Now we do.

Louis K. Greiff, professor of English and a Phi Beta Kappa member, agreed that AU has learned from the rejections, improved itself and now deserves a chapter.

"It's a shame that there are liberal arts students much more qualified than I was as an undergrad, but they are denied the opportunity to receive this recognition simply because they attend..." Greiff said.

---

The Mexican economy continues to suffer as a cease-fire brokered by the United States and put a maverick 19th-century Mexican leader to death.

The Mexican economy continues to suffer as a cease-fire brokered by the United States and put a maverick 19th-century Mexican leader to death.

The Mexican economy continues to suffer as a cease-fire brokered by the United States and put a maverick 19th-century Mexican leader to death.

The Mexican economy continues to suffer as a cease-fire brokered by the United States and put a maverick 19th-century Mexican leader to death.
Artists move to new workspaces

BY SARAH GOODREAU
AND DARREN MILLER

Students are having mixed reactions to the newly remodeled space in Harder Hall.

The old Scholes Library, which closed in the fall of 1992, was under construction for the past year, said Mary Lum, chair of the two-dimensional studies program. The newly remodeled space houses video, printmaking and photography.

Lum said she was "excited about working with what we have in the new space," but hadn't heard a lot of feedback from students. She said she expected them to find the new space "clean and intimidating." Heather Rebholtz, a senior printmaking major, said she heard mixed comments about the new space. "People say that they liked the old space because it was sociable and open with lots of windows, but the new space is nice and clean and more professional," Jennifer Petrie, a senior art education major, said. "The new space is nice, but the integrity of the building has been destroyed. The students are spread out into cubby holes. There's not as much interaction. You have to make a serious effort to see someone." Julia Stevanovic, a junior art student, agreed: "The different age groups won't get to interact as much. The freshmen won't get to meet the older students."

The former two-dimensional space on the second floor of Harder Hall was closed to be remodeled. Lum said the space will be operational next fall and would include video, painting and part of the freshman foundation space.

Artists move to new workspaces

BY SARAH GOODREAU

It snowed! I swore that I would never write about the weather again, but this time I really can't help it.

Once again, I'm writing to you that the weather in Alfred is, well, not so friendly. I have come to the conclusion that the weather in Alfred is just too unpredictable. I mean, I'm used to the lovely mild weather, but it's kind of nice to see the snow. It makes me feel just a little more comfortable. And like I said, I'm not really sure which way to go when it comes to the weather.

When I returned to Alfred a few weeks ago, it was Freezing cold, with a dusting of crunchy snow and ice. By the end of the week, however, I was hanging out on my porch enjoying the "balmy" sixty-five degree weather. I must say that I got very scared. I have, in my almost four years here, become quite accustomed to the lovely mild weather, but it's kind of nice to see the snow. It makes me feel just a little more comfortable. And like I said, I'm not really sure which way to go when it comes to the weather.

Then the rain came. In the middle of January, it was pouring rain. In "The Bean Trees" by Barbara Kingsolver, its says that if it thunders in January, it will snow in July. Let's hope this isn't the case. Or at least not in May. A lovely May graduation with two feet of snow? Will our parents be able to make it through the snow? But now the snow is here. Last night it was raining, and this morning I awoke to see the white stuff falling ever-so-gently from the sky.

I must say that I got very used to the lovely mild weather, but it's kind of nice to see the snow. It makes me feel just a little more comfortable. And like I said, I'm not really sure which way to go when it comes to the weather. I must say that I got very used to the lovely mild weather, but it's kind of nice to see the snow. It makes me feel just a little more comfortable. And like I said, I'm not really sure which way to go when it comes to the weather.

Super Bowl Party!

Sunday January 29th
Knight Club

Tackle Our FREE Mocktails

Co-sponsored by the Office of Alcohol and Other Drug Education
While Susan Boyle added 10, Hayes led AU with 13 points. William Smith, 74-44. Christie road game to undefeated and will remain a die-hard baseball fanatics. But all may be for naught if tragedies and negatives continue to dominate the headlines. Sure, the potential death of professional sports is important, but if all parties involved realize the fans really don't care about what occurs off the field, ice and court, maybe the hierarchies will get their respective acts together and remember what their job really is—entertaining the fans. Until then, I'll be stuck imagining what a New York Yankee World Series victory parade would have looked like crossing 42nd Street. It's strange that something has happened over 20 times in this century with such greats as Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Joe DiMaggio, Whitey Ford, Mickey Mantle, Yogi Berra, Thurman Munson and Reggie Jackson may never happen again.

Why not? Who knows? Certainly not Bud Selig, Don Fehr, or Mike Lupica. Nah, they love the publicity, the opportunity. They shouldn't.

Sandwiched between a large-market club and a small-market team, and maybe even educated. But that's all the attention I want to give OJ.

For a large portion of the 20th century, sports have been a mainstay of American society. The words "baseball" and "tradition" used to go hand in hand, and lately the NBA, for some godforsaken reason, has added excitement to the world of professional, collegiate and scholastic athletics. But all may be for naught if tragedies and negatives continue to dominate the headlines.

Faces of the 20th century, sports have been a mainstay of American society. The words "baseball" and "tradition" used to go hand in hand, and lately the NBA, for some godforsaken reason, has added excitement to the world of professional, collegiate and scholastic athletics. But all may be for naught if tragedies and negatives continue to dominate the headlines.

The nation's sports information directors.

• On Jan. 18, members of the AU track team competed in the Early Season College Open at Fredonia State University. Glenn Clinton (55 meter high hurdles) picked up the only Saxon victory, but strong performances were also given by Brian White (2nd - 200 meters), Davis Williams (2nd - pole vault), Andy Jacobs (3rd - 1500 meters), Louis Spring (3rd - 400 meters), Chris Weigandt (3rd - 1500 meters), and the team of Spring, Eddie Najeeullah, William Morrow, and Levie Johnson (2nd - 1,000 meter relay). No team statistics were kept in this competition.

• On Jan. 18, Sarah Lindley's wins in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle were not enough as Binghamton defeated AU, 139-95.

• On Jan. 20, the Saxons lost a road game to undefeated William Smith, 74-44. Christie Hayes led AU with 13 points while Susan Boyle added 10.

• On Jan. 18, the Saxon swimmers lost to Binghamton, 129-102. AU's Chris Adam picked up victories in the 100 yard individual medley and was a member of AU's winning 4x100 meter freestyle relay team.

• On Jan. 21, AU ended a nine-game skid with a 55-44 win at R.I.T. Kari Sergent led the Saxons with 19 points and 36 rebounds, while Boyle scored 14 points and grabbed 8 boards. Jill Irland hit two late threes and Terra Johnson (6 points, 5 assists) hit a shot with 1:09 remaining to help seal the victory.

• On Jan. 21, AU ended a nine-game winning streak with a loss at number 4 nationally ranked R.I.T., 86-66. Nipper scored 17 and Jason Amore added 16 points off the bench in the defeat.

• On Jan. 21, AU ended a nine-game skid with a 55-44 win at R.I.T. Kari Sergent led the Saxons with 19 points and 36 rebounds, while Boyle scored 14 points and grabbed 8 boards. Jill Irland hit two late threes and Terra Johnson (6 points, 5 assists) hit a shot with 1:09 remaining to help seal the victory.

• On Jan. 21, AU ended a nine-game skid with a 55-44 win at R.I.T. Kari Sergent led the Saxons with 19 points and 36 rebounds, while Boyle scored 14 points and grabbed 8 boards. Jill Irland hit two late threes and Terra Johnson (6 points, 5 assists) hit a shot with 1:09 remaining to help seal the victory.

• On Jan. 21, AU ended a nine-game skid with a 55-44 win at R.I.T. Kari Sergent led the Saxons with 19 points and 36 rebounds, while Boyle scored 14 points and grabbed 8 boards. Jill Irland hit two late threes and Terra Johnson (6 points, 5 assists) hit a shot with 1:09 remaining to help seal the victory.
Make catching the news a part of your daily rituals

As students, our responsibilities lie not only in keeping up with our studies and activities, but also in keeping up with our world. And our world is changing at an alarming rate.

No matter what area you study, you cannot effectively pursue any subject without a basic understanding and context of the world in which we live.

Our lives can be affected by news at all times. Knowing with and understanding the impact of current events only requires an hour a week.

Some students may not realize how easy it can be to stay current. If current events truly interest us, we can find a way to fit them into our daily lives.

And despite living in the middle of nowhere, we are no more isolated here than we would be in New York City. With current events truly affecting us, we can find a way to stay current.

If current events truly interest us, we can find a way to fit them into our daily lives. However, if we're not paying attention, we will have no way of changing their outcome.

If you don’t know what to do during that half-hour between Simpsons episodes, try tuning in to CNN. You could even watch the nightly news from Rochester, Buffalo or even Canada.

If you’re in Herrick Library, flipping through some newspapers might give you a good idea of what’s happening in the world.

It only takes a few minutes, and it's easy, too. Staying current with the news is just as important as the work we have for academics. Like our outside activities, understanding what’s happening in the world is an important way of “getting involved.”

Even in Alfred, national and international issues affect us—most notably, proposed cuts for the NEA and NEH. Patoka’s intended cuts for higher education. Other issues do not affect us as obviously, and if we’re not paying attention, we will have no way of changing their outcome.

If the press was buzzing with commentators pondering what the change in management on Capitol Hill would mean for the nation, Republicans took control of both houses of Congress for the first time in 40 years.

But no one seemed to care. Everyone was talking about Hillary, Newt’s mom, and Connie Chung. Everyone wanted to know who’s the bitch.

Connie Chung was interviewed. Mrs. Gingrich is a sweet old lady, proud of her son. She got flamboozled by a pro; she’s no bitch.

Newt’s mom told Connie Chung that she couldn’t say what her son thought of Hillary Clinton.

Connie Chung leaned over and said, “Come on. You can whisper it—just between you and me.”

And Newt’s mom said, “He thinks she’s a bitch.”

Now, I don’t know about you, but I am a journalist. When a journalist says “just between you and me,” that’s what it means.

I don’t care how many microphones tape recorders or camcorders are present. The reporter says “just between you and me,” the comment stays between the reporter and the interviewee.

If a reporter says “just between you and me,” the material is off the record. It can not be used unless another person confirms the statement. It can never be attributed to the person who originally said the comments.

Breaking the Society of Professional Journalists’ code of ethics in such a flagrant manner is simply not tolerated in most newsrooms, including the Fiat Lux. CBS News shouldn’t tolerate it, either.

But I must return to the question—who’s the bitch?

Mrs. Gingrich is a sweet old lady, proud of her son. She got flamboozled by a pro; she’s no bitch.

Newt’s mom knows about Hillary Clinton. She may or may not be a bitch.

But Connie Chung sure takes the prize.
A request for judicial intervention is New York State's required first step for a lawsuit to be placed on a judge's docket, said local attorney Judith Sember.

Evans' lawsuit against the University contends that his resignation in December 1993 was made under duress and that he should be re-instated as a professor of music.

Wagner said, "We're in the stretch between initiation and conclusion of the case." He declined to comment on any particulars of the case.

The University's attorney, Marion Blankof, also declined to comment on the case.

Judge George F. Francis was assigned to hear the case. The trial date has not been set.

Photograph by John Cole

Phi Beta Kappa

"AU," Greiff said. Jennifer Connors, a sophomore English major, also said Alfred's liberal arts college qualified for a Phi Beta Kappa chapter.

"Just because the ceramics programs stand out and shine doesn't mean we don't have an excellent liberal arts program," she said. "From my own experience, I know the English department is top-notch."

According to President Edward G. Coll Jr., "Phi Beta Kappa is the most prestigious honor society in the United States. Having a chapter at AU would confer that distinguished mark of excellence in liberal arts education which I believe we richly deserve."

In addition to conferring membership upon those with distinguished academic records, the society also offers scholarships and awards. Currently, over 200 colleges and universities host Phi Beta Kappa chapters. The Society was founded at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., on Dec. 5, 1776.

Crandall Health Center

The New Health Center Hours begin

Jan. 16, 1995

Monday: 9am - 8pm

Tue - Fri: 9am - 6pm

Sat/Sun: 12noon - 4pm

*Help us to better serve you by making an appointment to see our Doctors or Nurses (x2400)

*We welcome Walk-ins, first come first serve.

*To receive medical information after hours call the NURSELINE at 1(800) 343-8646

*We are proud to announce the appointment of Nancy Brinkwrit RN, NP as the New Director

Student Chapel

Sundays 11:00am

Speakers:

Jan 22th: Dr. Arnold Hence

Feb 19th: Ron Haas

Feb 26th: Ron Goldberg

Feb 26th: Lecia Pernrat

Mar 5th: Matthew Corrigan

Questions? Call Mike or Shire 587-9513 or 671-2475

Non-denominational  Christ Centered
The Top Ten 'Newt'isms:

10. Arts? Who needs The Arts?
9. My program is a chicken in every pot, and a B-2 bomber in every garage.
8. Why did I ever leave Georgia?
7. Will the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts please shut up?
6. Bert and Ernie are promoting the homosexual agenda. So’s Big Bird.
5. Every author should get a $5 million advance.
4. I like orphanages. I grew up in one. I wish my children had the same opportunity.
3. I never got any grants from the NEH, why should anyone else?
2. Wow, that Hillary Clinton sure can cook!

And the number one 'Newt'ism...

“I still love my mother.”

ATTENTION SUPER BOWL FANS COME JOIN THE FUN AT...

THE GALLERY
Of Fine Gifts

Everything on the second floor clothing boutique
Half Price-Half Price-Half Price
Clothing, Accessories, Totes, Belts, Hats, Bags, Fun Jewelry, Tee Shirts, Sweaters.
Downstairs a special savings of 10% storewide.
No lay-aways, food and consignment items excluded.
January 29 11am-4pm