Robert D. Garwood, one of Alfred's most popular students, who graduated from the College of Agriculture in 1914, was instantly killed in Texas, March 28 by a fall in his apartment. Mr. Garwood was a victim of the Stupak when the Verdell was sunk off the Irish coast last summer, and narrowly escaped with his life after an experience that no one would care to go through. After returning to America, Mr. Garwood tried to enlist with the U.S. Naval Air Corps, but was rejected on account of his eyes. He then went to Canada and was accepted in the Royal Flying Corps, and finished his course in that line, but a few weeks ago, and was in Texas to get some practical experience. His father, W. J. Garwood, of Cazenovia, received a dispatch from him saying that he had been a postal instructor and would remain in Texas for sometime, not going to the front until he should have more personal information to write home. Mr. Garwood is survived by his parents, Mrs. Garwood, one of Alfred's most popular teachers, and Mrs. Garwood, a former teacher in the College of Agriculture, and one whom it was a pleasure to meet in the halls of Kenyon. Mr. Garwood was the first editor of the Blaine, and was associated very closely with the Blaine during his four years in college. He turned the meeting over to Dr. Norwood, who called for subscriptions to the Blaine and the audience joined in singing the Star Spangled Banner, led by Dr. Norwood and the band.

Mrs. Garwood then very concisely stated the status of the Blaine and the previous loans, and asked the audience to send to her High Street, Alfred, New York, 85 cents of his invaluable remaining patriotic legacy, and the board would do, and what the consequences would be if we should fail to do our duty in this important matter. Mrs. Garwood then spoke of the beauty of the world outside. She then presented a book to him. He told of how much he had learned in his four years in college and how great was his appreciation. “The friendships of students and professors developed during the four years mean so much to both, are little realized during that time but are

Students Taking Conservation Course

Class Is To Do Volunteer Work This Summer

The class in Conservation which has been working on the Great Lakes under Miss Wood, is finishing up its work under Miss Wood. Those taking the work will be able to do volunteer work aiding the conservation campaign this summer. The Food Administration Department at Washington plans to have the work definitely organized and will send out plans for work soon.

The work which will be done this summer will be chiefly influencing public opinion by lectures and demonstration in the several communities represented in the class. There will also be chance for assistance work under the county agent, in demonstrating and lecturing. Last summer the Conservation work included only food, but this summer Miss Wood has planned to include the saving of clothing time, labor and money in all their phases. There are also two large campaigns which must be undertaken, the one to be east of the Alleghenies, twenty-two tenths the work for the west.

Thursday evening, unless something intervenes to prevent, Prov. Davis will lecture on “Fuel Conservation,” on a subject of the moment, and interesting. The lecture will be held in Agricultural Building, immediately following the Stupak Rally.

Intercollegiate Meet

The Agricultural School also has a new team this fall, and Mr. Binns has planned to include the saving of clothing time, labor and money in all their phases. There are also two large campaigns which must be undertaken, the one to be east of the Alleghenies, twenty-two tenths the work for the west.
