Dear Friend;

Having thought over every point as regards that position at Lawrence, Kansas, I am convinced that it offers just the chance I need. I am ambitious to do original things, to be a factor in the progress of modern ceramics and to have access to the laboratories in which such work can be done.

You will admit that there is small chance for study and investigation with the class of men who expect a person to produce at perfect matt glaze in one trial as Harley did.

I want that place at Lawrence and will justify you in securing it for me.

It means for me the kind of pay I want.

Yours very truly
Paul C. Cox.
