Want to be a Speaker for the Harry Potter World Exhibit this Fall?

Scholes Library will be hosting the "Harry Potter's World: Renaissance Science, Magic, and Medicine" exhibit from the National Library of Medicine, from Aug. 31 through Oct. 10! The exhibit will be accompanied by opening and closing receptions, contests, a series of lectures and events, and much more.

We are recruiting anyone, including faculty, staff, or community members, who might want to participate in our Hogwarts University speaker events. Do you have expertise or experience with subjects that fit into a magical world?

Speakers can present information that is conceptually related to the Harry Potter story (like the subject the Hogwarts students learn about at school), or can present on information about Harry Potter as literature, natural, or social science, or its cultural impact (as part of Muggle Studies).

If you want to learn more about this opportunity, or want to just go ahead and volunteer, please contact Eva Sclipa (Sclipa@alfred.edu), Scholes Art Librarian, as the event coordinator by Wednesday, July 1.
