COURSES OF INDUSTRIAL MECHANICS.

I. A Course in Mechanical Drawing, continuing through one year, and open to all students without restriction.

First Term—Elementary Principles of Mechanical Drawing, Perspective.

Second Term—Perspective continued, Architectural Drawing.

Third Term—Machine Drawing.

II. A Course extending through two years, followed by a Diploma bearing the seal of the University.

REQUIREMENTS FOR ENTRANCE.

Same as for the Scientific Course, together with the Mathematical studies of the Freshman Year.

FIRST YEAR.

First Term	{ 1. Trigonometry. 2. Physics.....Silliman. 3. Elements of Mechanical Drawing, Perspective.
Second Term	{ 1. Analytical Geometry. 2. Physics continued. 3. Perspective continued, Architectural Drawing.
Third Term	{ 1. Calculus. 2. Physics completed, Mechanics begun.....Peck. 3. Machine Drawing.

SECOND YEAR.

First Term	{ 1. Mechanics completed. 2. Descriptive Geometry, with Drawings. 3. Mechanism and Machinery of Transmission.....Fairbairn.
------------	---

[Transmission of motion by link-work, Wrapping connectors, Wheel-work, Sliding contact, Wheels and Pulleys, Toothed Wheels, Spur-Gearing, Pitch of Wheels, Teeth of Wheels, Bevel Wheels, Skew Bevels, Worm and Wheel, Strength of Teeth, Strength and Proportions of Shafts, Couplings, Disengaging and Re-engaging Gear, Hangers, Plummer Blocks, &c., Main Shafts.]

Second Term	{ 1. Elementary Application of Mechanics in the construction of Machines.....Lectures. 2. Descriptive Geometry completed, Shades and Shadows. 3. Machine Drawing.
Third Term	{ 1. Strength of Materials. 2. Theory of the Construction of the Steam Engine. 3. Machine Drawing, Shading and Tinting.

III. A Course extending through three years, followed by the Degree B. S.

First Year—Same as above.

Second Year—Same as above.

THIRD YEAR.

First Term	{ 1. Analytical Geometry of three Dimensions, and application of Calculus in the Theory of Machines 2. Applied Mechanics.....Weisbach. 3. Isometrical Drawing.
------------	--

Second Term	{ 1. The Mechanical Theory of Heat. 2. Applied Mechanics continued. 3. Machine Drawing, from Models.
Third Term	{ 1. Applied Mechanics completed. 2. Machine Drawings, Original Designs.

THEOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT.

COURSE OF INSTRUCTION.

JUNIOR YEAR.

Psychology and Logic.
Rhetoric and Elocution.
Hebrew Language.
Evidences of Christianity.
Natural and Biblical Ethics.
Critical and Exegetical Study of the Hebrew and Greek Scriptures.

MIDDLE YEAR.

Biblical Exegesis.
Natural and Biblical Theology.
Homiletics and Exegetical Essays.
Ecclesiastical History.
History and Philosophy of Christian Civilization.

SENIOR YEAR.

Doctrinal Theology.
History of Doctrines.
Pastoral Theology.
Composition and Delivery of Sermons.

DEGREES.

Those students who have sustained a good moral character, and completed either of the above courses, will be admitted to a Degree, after having passed a satisfactory examination.

The degree of Bachelor or Laureate of Education will be conferred on those who complete the Normal or Teachers' Course; and the degree of Bachelor of Arts or Laureate of Arts, on those who complete either of the other courses.

Students completing the three years course in Industrial Mechanics, will receive the degree of Bachelor of Science. Theological students can receive the degree of Bachelor of Arts on completing an equivalent of either of the longer College Courses.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

LOCATION.

The Institution is located at Alfred Center, Allegany Co., N. Y., two miles from the Alfred Depot, on the line of the Erie Railway.

The location is retired and healthy—in a rural district, surrounded by romantic and delightful scenery, amid a people of stern integrity, and of industrious and unobtrusive habits. Students are not exposed here to many of the ordinary allurements to vice and dissipation. Few spots are so well adapted to the quiet and successful pursuit of Science and Literature as the village of Alfred.

GOVERNMENT.

Parents who place their children in this Institution, and all Students who are sufficiently old to understand the necessity of order, can not be too well assured that the following regulations form the most essential part of the contract between them and us; and that whatever student wantonly violates them, and shows himself incorrigibly determined on pursuing his waywardness, will be expelled from the privileges of the Institution, and will not be permitted to enter it again, without special proof of reformation. Nor will an expelled student have any deductions made from full term charges.

SUMMARY OF REGULATIONS.

7. Absence from examination.
8. The use of gunpowder, in any form, about the premises.
9. Driving nails, screws, or tacks, etc., into walls or ceiling, without permission.
10. Lounging on beds, or disorder in study rooms.

REGULAR ACADEMIC EXERCISES.

The regular exercises, at which all the Students will be required to attend, unless especially excused, are Chapel exercises each day during the term; Recitations, from two to four, five days each week, from Monday morning till Friday evening; Regular exercises in Compositions, Declamations, Spelling, Reading, and Writing; Literary, Scientific, and Moral Lectures, by the Faculty; Public worship, each week, either on Saturday or Sunday, and Bible-class, according as the Students may be in the habit of attending public worship, either on the seventh or the first day of the week.

ROOMS AND BOARD.

The New University Building contains the Boarding Department, and rooms for the accommodation of about one hundred students, besides rooms for Professors and their families, and also Society, Music, and Paint Rooms. Rooms for Ladies are handsomely furnished and carpeted, with a sleeping room adjoining each, furnishing accommodations rarely found in other Ladies' Seminaries. The Boarding Hall is under the immediate supervision of one of the Faculty. There is also abundant accommodation for rooming and boarding in private families.

SOCIETIES.

The Alleghanian, the Orpbian, the Alfredian, the Athenæum, and the Christian Union, are the permanently organized Societies of the Institution. They are managed with ability, and are important aids to those who are desirous of becoming good writers, speakers, or efficient laborers in the intellectual, moral, or religious world.

OBSERVATORY.

The object of the observatory is two-fold, viz: to facilitate instruction in astronomy, and to perform such astronomical work as time limited by class-room duties will allow.

The observatory building consists of a circular room, surmounted by a revolving dome 19 feet in diameter, a computing room 12x18, a prime vertical room 12x18, a transit room 12x20, and a clock room 8x20.

The observatory is furnished with the following instruments:

I. An equatorial refracting telescope, by Henry Fitz, with an object glass of 9 inch clear aperture, and 9.5 feet focus. Value, $1,500.

II. A meridian circle, by Wm. J. Young, with an object glass by Merz & Mahler, Germany, of 8.25 inch clear aperture, and 4.5 feet focus. The circle is 20 inches in diameter, and reads by 4 verniers to 3 seconds of space. Value, $1,000.

III. An astronomical clock, by Wm. Bond & Son. Value, $400.

IV. A chronograph, or time recorder, by Wm. Bond & Son. Value, $700.

V. A sidereal chronometer. Value, $100.

VI. A filar micrometer. Value, $125.

The cost of the observatory building has been about $1,000.

Students in Astronomy have the privileges of the observatory without extra charge.

CABINET OF NATURAL HISTORY.

Fine and varied additions have been made to the specimens in Natural History during the past year.

LIBRARY.

The Institution Library consists of a choice selection of Histories, Biographies, Greek and Latin Classics, Mathematical and Scientific works, and standard English Literature. Additions are made to it yearly.

GYMNASIUM.

A Gymnasium for young Ladies has recently been established in connection with the Boarding Hall, where all young Ladies boarding in the Institution will be expected to take daily exercise.

CALENDAR FOR 1869-70.

The Fall Term will begin Wednesday, September 1, 1869.

The Winter Term will begin Wednesday, December 8, 1869.

The Spring Term will begin Wednesday, March 23, 1870.

The Fall and Winter Terms will continue thirteen weeks each, the Spring Term fourteen weeks.

Commencement, June 23, 1870.

Anniversary of the Literary Societies on the preceding days of the same week.

The Annual Meeting of the Alumni Association, on the afternoon and evening of Anniversary Day.

The Annual Meetings of the Stockholders and Trustees, on the Tuesday preceding Anniversary.

General examination of classes is held the last week of each term.

The public are cordially invited to attend the general exercises of the Institution enumerated above.

THE INSTITUTION AND THE PUBLIC.

The Trustees of the Institution, in presenting their Thirty-third Annual Catalogue to the public, would return their acknowledgments for the marked favor and liberal patronage received from its numerous friends and patrons. Their highest ambition and only object have been to found an institution that shall bless the church and the world. They have appreciated the necessity of laying the foundation of intellectual and moral attainments and discipline upon a broad and permanent basis; and they have endeavored to provide the appliances and facilities for securing these objects. They labor to send forth young men and women, so educated as to qualify them for the realities and responsibilities of active life.

NOTES.

In the following Catalogue, an attempt has been made to give the names of all who have been members of this Institution, in the order of their entrance, or Matriculation. Being the first attempt of the kind, it is necessarily very imperfect. This is especially true of several of the first years, there being no record on which to rely. Doubtless many names have been omitted, or inserted inaccurately. Any information that will tend to give more accuracy to future Catalogues—either General or Triennial—is earnestly solicited. Information is especially asked respecting all who served our country in its late great war. It is desired, as soon as the necessary facts can be obtained, to publish a "Roll of Honor." Give full particulars.

The star (*) before a name indicates deceased. When repeated after the name, it signifies that the individual died while in office, or while in the United States service.

LIFE AND LABORS OF PRESIDENT WM. C. KENYON.

A Memorial Address, delivered by appointment of the Trustees of Alfred University, at the close of Commencement Exercises, July 3d, by JONATHAN ALLEN.*

Four years ago, these Anniversary Exercises were begun with the sad funeral rites of Mrs. Melissa Ward Kenyon. This year, the same exercises have been shrouded with the pall of sorrow, because of the death of President Kenyon himself, who was at once the father, president, chief support, and glory of this Institution.

Thus runs the brief and only direct account thus far received by his relatives of this sad event: He had been failing very fast for a week, getting perceptibly weaker from day to day, almost from hour to hour; but such was his intense desire to reach home, that his home passage had been paid, trunks packed, and a man engaged to take him to the ship next day. About midnight, the forerunner of the death struggle appeared; he was better toward morning; but at six o'clock he commenced sinking rapidly, and at thirty-five minutes past ten on the morning of the 7th of June, 1867, "he was at rest, till the glorious resurrection morn."

The last letter from himself, brief, and with weak and trembling hand, was to his brother, dated at Tower Hill, London, and thus begins: "May the Lord bless you all." And continues: "I am not much but a shadow, but hope the shadow will last across the ocean. We have every possible comfort where we are, but shall so rejoice to reach America."

His stricken companion has not yet had time to come hither; but if Providence has been propitious, is on her lonely voyage across the Atlantic, and doubtless is to-day approaching the shores of America, and searching through tears for its first faint outlines. May the Father of the widow and broken-hearted graciously have her in

* Whereas, we have listened with deep interest and great satisfaction to the Address of Prof. Allen, delivered in response to a resolution of this Board of Trustees, therefore, Resolved, That we ask of Prof. Allen, for publication, a copy of the eloquent and touching address delivered by him on Wednesday last, before the Trustees and Students of Alfred University, on the life of President Kenyon, and his services in the cause of Education in connection with Alfred Academy and Alfred University.

By order of the Trustees of Alfred University.

B. F. LANGWORTHY, President.
O. D. SHERMAN, Secretary.

keeping, tempering wave and storm, and bestow upon her from His infinite compassion and tenderness the consolation and support which He alone can give.

Gathered as we are in the valley and shadow of death, where the gloom is so thick that we can see neither beside nor before distinctly, we can but look above. How repeatedly, as these closing exercises of the year have been in progress, and we have instinctively sought, but sought in vain, for the presence and guidance of him who, for so many years, has presided on these occasions, have we been led to repeat: "My Father, my Father, the chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof." And that other scripture is this day fulfilled before our eyes: "One soweth, and another reapeth." "Other men labored, and ye are entered into their labors." To-day we have been gathering in richly-fruited sheaves from the harvest field of him who came into it with precious seed, and preparing the ground, hedging it round about, sowed his seed with a free and open hand, watched and watered and cultivated, through long years of toil and pain and sorrow. Let us, then, gathered under such circumstances, in these halls consecrated by such services, from this place dedicated by his presence and guidance, through long years, to learning and religion, sketch in brief words as we may his life-services and character.

William Colgrove Kenyon was born in the town of Richmond, R. I., on the 23d of October, 1812. Of poor and humble parentage, he was at the age of five years bound out to a guardian. He experienced the severity and ungraciousness not unfrequently attaching to the life of a ward. When he became old enough, he was hired out summers to neighboring farmers, and in winters he was put out to board and get such schooling as he might, doing "chores" night and morning, and working one day in the week for his board, meanwhile attending the district school. The severity and unrelentingness of the toil connected with his situation, though bitter at the time, united with his natural tenderness, gave him that unrelenting grasp with which he put his hand to every undertaking, and the unrelenting energy and drive with which it was urged forward. The aspirations of his spirit were first awakened by an aged Deacon laying his hand benignly upon his head—there is much virtue frequently imparted by thus laying on of hands—and assuring him that he could make a man.*

* The following sketch, written by one who knew, is full of touching interest:

"Our winter's school was opened by a teacher who had enjoyed the advantages of an academic education. He had the reputation of being a fine scholar, and having promising abilities for teaching. Kindness was his power. Among some forty others, there came one, a child of misfortune, who had received many more cuffs and kicks than smiles and kisses. He was a boy of some thirteen summers, his form slender,

At about fourteen years of age, he united by baptism with the First Church of Hopkinton. The three following winters he spent in Dea. Daniel Lewis' and Dea. John Langworthy's families, attending school. He ever after looked back to these Christian homes, with their high social, refining and elevating influences, as bright spots in his life, and awakening noble life purposes. Those who knew him in those times testify that all work was driven with slightly clothed, and his countenance careworn. He had been a member of our school, a part of the time, the two past winters; but no one had ever made him a companion, or thought of doing so. He appeared melancholy and heart-stricken, said little to any one, and exhibited no particular anxiety to engage in the sports that delighted other children. There seemed nothing bad about him. He was not addicted to malicious tricks—neither a mischief-maker nor malignant; yet, when teased and vexed by other children, as he sometimes was, he would, now and then, avenge himself by a sudden outburst of passion, that made him a terror for the moment, and then he would quietly shrink away and brood over his sorrows. He was not a scholar. Books had no charm for him. He could only read the easiest lessons; and as to spelling, he was often known to fail in getting a single letter to a word that belonged to it. We had seen him punished with savage cruelty for his very awkward attempts at reading and spelling; yet it never seemed to mend the difficulty, but rather made it worse. Our teacher, full of sympathy, and with cheerful words, that won upon the confidence of all, sought to catch his eye as he came into the room, and pass a cheerful word with him; but it was impossible. Without looking at the teacher, or any one else, he glided noiselessly to the remotest corner, and sat down in a place partly concealed from observation by the desks of the writing benches. When the teacher, in his talks with the scholars individually, finally reached him, he placed his hand lightly upon his head, and looking him fully in the face, spoke to him in words full of kindness and sympathy. He had never known a teacher to speak kindly to him before, and had never heard any one do so. It aroused in us more than usual interest. His face lighted up with a smile, and his eyes beamed with a sudden gleam of intelligence. After a moment's consideration, the boy was told, among other things to be done, that he must study arithmetic, and to be prepared next morning with arithmetic and slate. He was treated by the other scholars that day with a kindness never before shown. Somehow, the example set by the teacher seemed to be contagious. All began to look upon him as one of the school. Something seemed to gladden him, and chase away his usual sadness; but the next morning he came with his accustomed appearance, and when asked by the teacher for his arithmetic and slate—"Hav'n't got any," was his response, "our folks say I shan't have any, that I must learn to read first." "Doubtless your folks will allow me to be judge of what you must do while attending school," replied the teacher; "but if they will not provide the necessary books, I hardly know what we can do." At this, one of the scholars, feeling an interest in the effort made for him, said, "I have a small slate that I will lend him, if some one will let him have an arithmetic." The teacher said, "I will furnish the arithmetic." That day he commenced "cyphering." Before the winter closed, he proved to be the best arithmetician in the school, was a very good reader, and a tolerable speller. We next met him in college. He was a member of the Senior Class—a superior mathematician, and no mean linguist. He had paid his own bills. He has since been heard from as an educator. Such is the power of kindness."

Rev. L. M. Cottrell writes as follows:

"Among the few who have written their names, as with a pen of iron, upon the tablets of our hearts, none stand higher than Prof. Wm. C. Kenyon. We deplore his loss, and turn instinctively to pay a tribute to his memory, and acknowledge with gratitude his influence in stirring so many hearts with a noble enthusiasm to be useful in the world. It was my fortune to be a school-boy with him one winter term, at the old house in Hopkinton, familiarly known as the Kenyon School-house. This is my earliest recollection of school days. He was older, yet I remember him well. He had traits of character which made an impression upon his associates. I have a more distinct recollection of him than of any other boy with whom I had so little acquaintance. His dignified manner, and the peculiar style of the boy, were not forgotten. He was round and slim, with a straight arm. He had a wiry, withy, whip-lash activity, light complexion, high forehead, with curly hair, blue eyes, and a frank, open face. His peculiarities were acknowledged by his associates. He was full of pluck. He was not afraid of boys twice his size. In these rude times, it was not uncommon for the older boys to 'set on' the younger, for the purpose of seeing a trial of strength, and often, in the conflict and contest, the blood would run. But it was well understood, that he would never give up. Though at times greatly excited, and, as we judged, greatly wronged, yet he never was disposed to retaliate, and seemed above the a view to gain time for his studies, reading and studying by fire-light when no better was at hand. When at work on the farm, he kept a book handy, that all odd spells might be improved. When about nineteen years of age, he bought his time of his guardian, giving his note for the same. This he paid, principal and interest, with money earned by teaching in this Institution. He commenced the trade of a machinist, working at Westerly, R. I., Schenectady, and New York city. He prepared for college while working at his trade in the machine shop.* His life, as sketched by himself at that time, was diversified with study, work in the shop, and running with the engine to fires, as he was, it seems, a member of a fire company. He did much of his study in the shop, learning his lessons while working with the lathe and file, and, according to the re-spirit of revenge. It was a trial of strength, gaining victories and adding to courage by conflict. These traits of character, which marked him as a bold, persevering, and yet forbearing lad, led him, as he was developed, to the highest positions of usefulness. He had his trials. During his preparation for College, he could not carry his Latin Grammar to and from the machine-shop without invidious remarks. His desire for education was regarded as ambition to live without work. Yet, as he pursued his course of study through years of toil, he rose in intellectual power, in disinterested labor, and the esteem and love of his companions, until time and real worth have placed him at the head of the noble few who have sacrificed largely for the good of others. His sympathies embraced every benevolent object. The poor slave found in him a bold advocate; the inebriate, a disinterested friend; the Christian pilgrim, an ardent brother. But the great central idea which controlled all the forces of his life, was the education and moral elevation of the young. In this work he was most eminently successful, as the Institution which rose under his fostering care clearly indicates. How many of this class, who have greeted him as their teacher, who have been encouraged by his words of cheer, and inspired by his noble example, do bless the day they ever came under his influence! And as time shall reveal his worth, they will rise up and call him blessed. While we deplore his death, we would consecrate his memory, and cherish his faithfulness with devout thanksgiving. His body rests with the dead; but he lives in our hearts, and his influence will continue to exert its elevating power until angels shall crown his work with divine approval."

* Rev. Geo. B. Etter, in a brief sketch of Prof. Kenyon's life, says:

"It was here that the writer first saw him, filing away on a piece of iron, and in an undertone declaiming the adjective 'bonus, bona, bonum,' from a Latin Grammar lying on the bench before him. For a year or two succeeding that introduction, we met him regularly at the weekly debates of the Apprentices' Library Association in Schenectady, and often discussed the merits of the books we were reading from the small but choice library of that institution—one of which, entitled 'Biographies of Self-made Men,' he always regarded as having been of great service to him, and spoke of in that light at our last interview, just before he sailed for Europe. The step was an easy one for him from the Apprentices' Library Association to Union College; from which, after a few years of study, interrupted somewhat by the manual labor and teaching necessary to pay current expenses, he received the usual diploma. From that time forward he was a servant of the public, and one to whom the qualifying words 'good and faithful' might safely be applied."

"Whoever undertakes to write a biography of Prof. Kenyon, will find in his preliminary studies abundant proof that 'the child was father of the man.' Brief and hasty inquiries of those who knew him in childhood, have satisfied us on that point. One man told us, that when a lad at work on the farm, he always had a book where it could be easily taken up whenever there was a spare moment before sitting down to a meal. Another, of about his own age, who one winter lived in the family with him, and went to the same district school, spoke of his readiness to build the morning fire, because it gave him such a good light to read by. Still another told us, that when working on a farm by the month, he 'never assisted on a job that he did not boss before it was through.' This reminded us of the descriptive name by which we used to hear him called at Alfred, in the best spirit, and without a thought of impropriety—'Boss Kenyon'—a title which we always regarded as indicating that whenever he took hold of anything, it was with a will, and in a spirit which impressed those associated with him, that they were safe in following."

collection of the Rev. J. R. Irish, who was his room-mate while in college, and to whom I am indebted for these facts, he recited with classes in a school known as the Lyceum. He entered Union College in the summer of 1836, having gone over only about half of the studies usually required for entering.

Owing to this circumstance, he had to work very hard in order to keep up with his classes, standing, at first, "medium," rising soon to "max" in mathematics, and "good" in languages. The winter of 1836-7 he spent at work in the "Novelty Works" of New York city, being employed by the late Thos. B. Stillman. He nearly kept up with his college studies during the time. One vacation and a part of a term he taught a district school. Another term was nearly lost by having the small-pox. "That seeming misfortune saved him to us and to the world, by helping nature throw off a severe pulmonary disease, which had been left upon him after an attack of the pleurisy." Dr. Nott, President of Union College, became deeply interested in him, cheering him on in his severe struggles, and tried to get aid for him from the American Education Society, but aid was refused, on the ground that he, being a Seventh-day Baptist, was not orthodox. The Hopkinton Sewing Society aided him somewhat, as also did another local society. The money received from these societies, he paid back after he began teaching, testifying that their manifestation of confidence in him was worth as much as the money, giving him new inspiration to press forward. In the spring of 1839, while in his junior year, the Rev. James R. Irish, who was then Principal of this school, being called to the pastorate of the church in this place, secured as his successor the services of Prof. Kenyon.

Preparing himself for the ministry, he had intended to devote his life to the missionary work. At the time of coming here, he expected to remain only two or three years at most, then to turn his attention to foreign fields; but he found this to be a mission field, though somewhat different from the one he was contemplating. It was a field comparatively unoccupied by institutions of learning—a virgin soil, ready to be broken by the plowshare of education, and to receive the seed of culture. He opened his first term with twenty-five students. In addition to the preparation demanded by his daily duties in school, he prosecuted his college studies, frequently working most of the night. His room-mate of those times states, that frequently, on waking towards morning, he found him standing at his studies, just as he left him on retiring. He was examined in some of his studies, at least, and in due time received the degree of Master of Arts. Whether he had previously received the Bachelor's degree, we are not able definitely to state.

His work here was a hard, pioneer work, as must ever be the founding or building up of a school in a region without wealth. It imposes a life full of toil and sacrifice—full of varied and many-handed service and sacrifice. Most emphatically is it true of this school, which has ever been the school of the poor. Not many sons and daughters of the rich have entered its portals. Beginning its mission in a small upper room or chamber, it has ever since been able to give a proof of its divine work similar to that given by Christ of the divinity of his mission. It was divine, because the poor had the gospel preached unto them; so the mission of this school has been to the poor. Herein is the especial nobility of its calling. May it ever continue thus.

The work enlarging on his hands, he gave himself entirely to it. It was, in his estimation, "worthy of a true and noble ambition, to build seminaries and colleges, and fill them with young men and women who, properly trained, might go forth to exert an influence as lasting as time." For the first two years, the school continued to occupy the small one-story building erected in 1837. This becoming too small, it was much enlarged in the summer of 1841, and the accommodations thereby greatly improved. In the fall of the same year, Prof. Kenyon was appointed Superintendent of Common Schools for this county. He spent the winter and a part of the following summer in the discharge of the duties of his office—Eld. Irish taking his place as Principal of the school. Visiting and talking to the schools in the day time, and addressing the patrons in the evening, he awakened an interest wherever he went. The great event of the winter, to many of us common school teachers, was his visit, with its stir and rush and enthusiasm. Returning to his duties in the Institution, many of the teachers to whom he had come as an inspiration in the weary routine of the school room, followed him to Alfred, desiring to be still farther vitalized, and to submit themselves to his guidance and instruction. Receiving thus an increase of patronage from teachers—the very best kind of patronage for such an Institution—the school immediately took an upward bound. It was found then, as ever after, that his personal presence was the very best possible kind of advertisement for the Institution.

One of those slender, compact, nervous, magnetic men—a man very earnest, very incisive, somewhat radical, even eccentric, if you please, yet very genuine—the first sight of him, on his arrival here to take charge of the school, stirred one young life to the core. The first address that we heard him deliver roused and thrilled us as no other, and we worked for days in a dream; and his teaching was suggestive, electric, inspiring. We students in those early days, in our little gatherings, voted him, save in a few points, the greatest man living. His whole being appeared to our youthful eyes condensed, intensified, spiritual energy, with strange fascinating power. As the chemists assert that each drop of water contains electricity enough to produce, when set free, a small thunderbolt, so he appeared to our youthful imaginations as possessing in each minutest globule of his blood, life-force sufficient to electrify and stir into action any nature, however dormant. The chief excellency of a teacher does not consist in the number of facts he may store away in the minds of his pupils, but in awakening their individual powers to independent action, in dispelling stupidity, drowsiness, quickening them into vitality, fervor, kindling aspiration, spurring on to self-improvement, high endeavor, thus leading on to noble achievement. President Kenyon sometimes said that the noblest inscription which he could have for his tombstone, would be, that he had been good at drill, and secured mental concentration, steadiness of mental nerve and eye, steadfastness of purpose, leading to an appreciation of the infinite importance of life's opportunities and responsibilities.

On the 5th day of August, 1840, he was married to Miss Melissa B. Ward, whose life thenceforward was inseparably interwoven with the life of the Institution, and who, like her husband, gave all, even to the offering of life itself, for its welfare. In the summer of 1842, he secured the services of Miss Caroline B. Maxson as Preceptress. The school received, on the 31st of January, 1843, an Academic Incorporation from the Regents of the University. In 1845, Prof. Ira Sayles became Associate Principal, and in the following year Miss Abigail A. Maxson took the place of Miss Caroline B. Maxson, as Preceptress. The facilities of the Institution were greatly increased by the erection of three additional buildings; the funds for which, some ten thousand dollars, were mostly furnished by the individual efforts and credit of the Associate Principals. The following statistics show the rapid growth and vigor of the school in those early times. It was organized in 1836, with thirty-six students. The next year there were forty-four, and in 1838-9 about one hundred. In 1842-3 there were two hundred and thirty-nine; in 1843-4 two hundred and six; in 1844-5 two hundred and forty-three; in 1845-6 three hundred and twenty-seven; in 1846-7 three hundred and ninety-two; and in 1847-8 four hundred and fifty-five—a number that has not been excelled or equaled but three times since. Not to mention other causes, there has sprung up, since the origin of this Institution, within the surrounding region, which was then a comparatively unoccupied field, some five colleges, and from forty to forty-five academic institutions.

On the 4th of July, 1849, five other individuals, who had previously been more or less employed as teachers in the Institution, were associated with the Principals, with equal rights, privileges, and responsibilities. Though the members of that band of teachers are scattered, he is the first to be called up higher. To those left, his death comes as an admonition to labor with his fervor, for the shades of night fast draw on. The westerning sun already begins to cast fast lengthening shadows, and homeward footsteps cannot linger long by the way, ere darkness overtake them.

On the 28th of March, 1857, a University Charter, to be so grafted on to the Alfred Academy as seemed best, was granted by the Legislature. On the 15th of April, the College department was organized. Prof. Kenyon was appointed President, and immediately entered upon the duties of his office. He was ordained to the gospel ministry, and installed pastor of the church in Hartsville, February, 1861, which relation he sustained, to the satisfaction and the very great benefit of the church, as long as he remained in connection with the Institution. In September, 1861, President Kenyon was married to Mrs. Ida S. Long. Retiring from active connection with the Institution at the close of the academic year for 1865, he went to Missouri, where he remained only a few months. He was soon at his work again in the Institution, and though offered one of the most lucrative and tempting educational positions in the gift of the State, he steadfastly held to his purpose to devote a complete life-service to the cause of education in Alfred. Illness, however, soon compelled him again to seek medical aid, rest, and foreign travel. Spending most of the summer at Dr. Taylor's "Swedish Movement Cure," in New York city, his health was so far restored as to enable him to sail for Europe in October last. His letters, published from time to time, from Europe, were very fine specimens of that kind of literature. Seldom, if ever, have we read letters of travel with so much useful and interesting information condensed into so small a space. Spending the winter with Mrs. Kenyon's friends in Prussia, he had reported continual improvement of his health. All began to look forward to the time when he would be at his work again in the Institution. Those more especially interested were gladly anticipating working again under his lead and guidance, for the Presidency was only filled, during his absence, on the express agreement that it should terminate in his favor whenever his health would permit of his resuming his duties; so that, at his death he was virtually President of the Institution, another simply acting in that capacity during his illness and absence.

In early spring, President and Mrs. Kenyon had started from Forste, in Prussia, for the Orient, intending to take steamer at Trieste directly for Alexandria; thence, after traveling through portions of Egypt, to go to Palestine. But soon after starting they were compelled, on account of his ill health, to turn aside to Geneva, in Switzerland, spending four weeks there; but as he was getting weaker from week to week, they turned their faces homeward, stopping a few weeks at Paris, thence to London on the 2d of May. The particulars of his last hours, we have already rehearsed in your hearing as far as known. His funeral took place on the 11th of June, at Abney Park Cemetery, near London.

We have thus sketched in brief outline a few of the more prominent events in President Kenyon's outward life. The subjective life, the character which lay back of them, giving them significance and effect, who can sketch? Commencing in the depths of poverty and obscurity, with resolute and dauntless energy, meeting and overcoming the most unpropitious circumstances, pushing his way up alone and unaided, forgetting all small or selfish ends, overleaping the mere prudential virtues, he gave himself heroically to great aims and unselfish ends. Sacrificing ease, health, and finally life itself, upon the altar of Christian culture, centering all the energies of his being on this definite end, and working towards it with persevering toil, he succeeded; and this he held to be the secret of all success, not conformation or size of brain. In his own language, "Without perseverance it is almost impossible to accomplish any object, however small; but with it, anything within the reach of human power can be accomplished. 'I can't,' is an expression that should never proceed from the lips of any person. Many, whose powers are buried in the depths of obscurity, had it not been for this, might have occupied exalted stations, and caused a luster to shine along the path which they trod, and exerted a beneficial influence as lasting as life itself." Thus he wrote in 1835, while preparing for college, and his whole life was its exemplification. He believed with the great Cardinal Richelieu, that in all the vocabulary of youth, there was no such word as "fail." The neglected boy, beaten about by adverse circumstances, trained by necessity to self-reliance, becoming thus initiative, incisive, a leader that others instinctively follow, and by selecting his life-work and holding singly and perseveringly to it, he was enabled, through the power of an indomitable will, to work out his great mission.

Alfred Academy, taking on the name of University as it grew, was his only child, and no parent ever watched more sleeplessly, or toiled more unremittingly, or prayed more earnestly, than he for it. Was it in want? The bread of carefulness was kept from his own mouth, that it might be fed. To our personal knowledge, he has gone for weeks, even in times of ill health, without meat or butter for his own table, while all of his own resources were being used for the good of the Institution. He with his associate teachers carried for years, with such aid as a Board of Trustees, not rich in this world's goods, could give, a load of harrassing debts, incurred by the increasing demands of the school. Was the Institution sick? With fingers upon its pulse he watched its every symptom through the long weary hours of night. Rising early from his sleepless couch, his rush up and down stairs in early morning was more effectual than alarm clock or chapel bell to arouse the sleepers; beginning betimes the toils of an anxious day, closing his wearisome labors at night to gain some relief through intermittent sleep, seldom for years sleeping after three or four in the morning, frequently not after one or two. Not unfrequently have we seen him, in times of prostration, compelled to rest by the way in going to and from his classes, or depending on the help of some one; and in the class-room, when no longer able to stand or sit, lie upon the benches, and thus go through with the lessons. Thus, through days of suffering and toil, and nights of agony so depressing that death would have been gladly accepted, was he ever at his post. In all hours of misfortune, of doubt and despondency, he had faith that amounted to assurance, and rising from the ashes of frustrated or blighted prospects, and letting "the dead past bury its dead," he used all failures as stepping-stones to higher effort and nobler achievement.

Was the fair name of the Institution assailed? He came to its rescue with all the intense earnestness of an outraged father. He often said that he cared little what was thought or spoken of himself, so be they spared the Institution. However intense the contest in reference to the numerous issues arising, but convince him that the high interests for which he was working demanded it, and the question was settled.

As illustrative of this deep interest, we make the following quotation from a letter written by him shortly before sailing for Europe: "Alfred University is much dearer to my heart than my life. Its interests are my interests, its prosperity will delight me more than any personal emoluments that could possibly accrue to me. I am now urged to accept a position in connection with the Normal Schools about to be opened, and at a salary that might gratify my ambition; but I have no desire to accept any such place. I have no expectation of teaching in any other school than that at Alfred. May the Lord prosper and bless Alfred as never before. May your hands be strengthened, and your hearts cheered, in the grand success of the good work in which you are all engaged. And I want to congratulate the good people of Alfred on their liberality in doing for their Institution. It seems to me like a dream, too good to be a reality, and at the same time I am satisfied that it is only the handsome beginning of what they will do hereafter."

Such was President Kenyon's definite object, and the inspiration of his life work; and after an experience with him reaching through twenty-eight years, most of the time, with short intervals here and there, in the intimate relationship of student or assisting teacher, we can say, without reservation, that in many of the essential attributes, his was one of the truest and noblest of natures, ever full to overflowing with noble impulses. He had his faults, but his very faults were his virtues intensified, leaping beyond bounds. They sprung not from wrongness of motive, but were the abnormal or intense action of right forces. It took no ordinary rein and curb to hold such a fiery nature in check. If he descended like a thunderbolt upon the stupid and the lazy, the frivolous or the rowdy; if gloved hands and anointed locks, those symbols of affectation and foppery, found no favor in his eyes; if school girl prim and simper and frippery, those signs of shallow mothers and silly daughters, were an abomination to him; yet the earnest seeker after knowledge, the hard worker, and the needy, found in him the gentleness of the dews of Hermon, the sacrifice and help of a father. Did ever a needy student go to him for aid, and not receive it, if it was in his power to assist? Nay, times many has the help been freely, generously proffered, without the asking, as many an one, from a full heart, can testify. To him life was a fiery battle, and his voice ever rung out to the young as the battle shout of a leader tried and true. Ever riding earnestly, even furiously, ahead amid flame and smoke, he had words of cheer for those that would spur up to his side or press hard after; but woe to the laggard or the coward.

There is a virtue in duly caring for the body, but the higher sympathies and admiration of the world go with him who subjects the animal, even making it give way to the spiritual, using up all life forces for the ends of public good, persevering through hunger and weakness, nervous excitement, and depression. Frugality is a virtue; but humanity is kindled into enthusiasm in beholding and sharing the sacrifices and benefits of a generous nature. The public sooner or later crown with especial honor those who sacrifice wealth and life for others' sake. There is virtue in discreetness and prudent reserve, but the hearts of men, and most especially of youth, open most readily to him who is found earnest, even intense. The man of noble, generous, intense impulses, is the one to stir the dormant energies of the soul, to awaken the latent forces of youthful natures. Humanity bows before a positive character, one who rushes forward amid opposition and ill-will, if need be, pressing fearlessly forward, with his eye fixed on the great purpose of life set before himself.

President Kenyon was a man whose life was constantly overlapping these prudential virtues, and taking on the heroic and Christian ones of self-abnegation, with entire consecration to a definite and high purpose, achieving through self-sacrificing endeavor.

What are the fruits? Some of the most manifest are: He began here in a building costing some four or five hundred dollars; he left buildings and other property worth some fifty thousand, not the result of gift from some rich benefactor, but an outgrowth of toil, and sweat, and struggle, where each brick, and board, and nail, came by the hardest, through the labor of teachers, assisted by the free but small gifts of those whose hearts were much larger than their purses—an endowment fund so far advanced as to promise much for the institution—the last writing that we witnessed of his, being the signing his name as the largest subscriber to the same. Five thousand young men and women came as pupils under his instruction. They are more than monuments, more than riches or worldly titles. They are living powers—many an one, awakened to new life, invigorated, inspired, cultured in various degrees, going forth to the world's work, pressing into the various positions of influence and power, moulding and directing thousands of other minds, insomuch that though dead, he speaks, and will continue to speak through oncoming ages, in a language many-voiced. He lives, and will work on through multitudinous hands, in diverse pursuits and callings—teach in schools, think, and write, and print, speak from the pulpit, plead or decide in courts, heal the sick, make laws in legislative halls.

Graduates, may a double portion of the spirit of your departed President rest upon and be with you in all of life's labors. May his forgetfulness of self in his labors for you, be an ensample and an inspiration to you. Emulate his many excellencies. Go forth to your life work, taking upon you labor as a glad service—a continual thank-offering, remembering, that all truly great living is ever sacrificial, and all divinely noble lives are ever crowned with thorns.

Alumni and students of other days, as in the drive and rush of life the news fell upon you as a shadow at noonday, that the teacher and guide of your school days, he whom you were wont to look up to as a father, was at rest, and leaving your business and employments, you gather in here to pay the tribute prompted by gratitude and love, having done this, may you return to the hot and busy ways of life with clearer vision of the far-reaching relationship and solemn issues of all labor.

Trustees and Teachers, co-laborers with him, continue the good work whereunto you have given your hands; taken up where it has been brought through toil and sacrifice and suffering, may it not fail nor falter, but gather strength and nobleness, as the years go by, and thus the noble work of the past become the type of nobler achievements yet to come.

And upon the relatives of the departed, may the benedictions of the all-compassionate Father descend, and rest forevermore. And unto us all may there be given abundantly of the Divine Spirit, enabling us to present ourselves an offering of peace and good will, a free sacrifice, consecrated to the high heroism of advancing all elevating industries, the building up of all ennobling institutions, fitting ourselves and others for the fast-gathering glories of the heavenly world. Amen.

Preamble and Resolutions adopted at the Annual Meeting of the Trustees of Alfred University, held July 2d, 1867.

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God, in his wisdom, to remove from his earthly labors our honored colleague and faithful co-worker, Professor William C. Kenyon, who died in the city of London, June 7th, 1867, while returning from a tour in Europe, for the recovery of impaired health; and

Whereas, in his death, the cause of education at large, but especially as represented in Alfred Academy, of which he was for so many years Principal, and which ultimately in the establishment of Alfred University, of which he was President until compelled by ill health to resign, has lost one of its most enthusiastic, devoted, and efficient supporters; therefore,

Resolved, That while we neither murmur nor complain of the ways of Divine Providence, but bow submissively to them, we, nevertheless, cannot but deeply feel our loss, and mourn our bereavement.

Resolved, That we hereby tender our sympathies and condolence to the widow and relatives of the deceased, praying that God may comfort them in their sorrows, while they call to mind the self-sacrificing and Christian life of him whose memory they so tenderly and worthily cherish.

Resolved, That we also sympathize with the students who spent their school life under the guidance and instruction of Professor Kenyon, and who, animated by his zeal, are manfully contending in life's arena, and winning honorable distinction among their fellows, but who, by this Providence, are made to mourn as they only mourn when those most tenderly loved and cherished are silently borne to the resting place of the dead.

O. D. SHERMAN, Secretary.

Resolutions adopted by the Students of Alfred University, at a meeting held June 28th, 1867.

Whereas, in the Providence of God, Professor William C. Kenyon has been removed by the hand of death; and whereas, in devoting his life to the cause of education, and consecrating all his powers to the work of building up this institution of learning, he has done a work which calls forth our highest love and admiration, and entitles him to our lasting regard; therefore—

Resolved, That while we bow in Christian submission to this afflictive providence, we deeply mourn the loss of one who, by his self-sacrificing spirit and noble Christian character, has won our highest respect and honor.

Resolved, That by his success in founding and building up this institution, and his eminent ability as an instructor, he was entitled to a place among the first educators of our country.

Resolved, That in the death of Professor William C. Kenyon, humanity has lost a noble benefactor, this institution a father and guardian, and we as students a true friend, whose life-long example of earnest endeavor and untiring energy is most worthy of our earnest emulation.

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved companion and relatives of the deceased, and commend them to Him who afflicts in love, and wounds only to heal.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the widow of the deceased, and that their publication be requested, in the Cuba Patriot, Wellsville Free Press, Angelica Reporter, Canisteo Valley Times, Elmira Advertiser, and Sabbath Recorder.

Dirge sung at the Commencement of Alfred University, July 3d, in Memory of Prof. Wm. C. Kenyon.

I.
Mournfully, tenderly, linger we here,
To breathe our sad requiem over the bier;
God's hand in affliction is laid on our head;
A "godly man ceaseth"—a loved one is dead.

II.
Hushed be the voices of gladness and mirth;
Silence becometh the creatures of earth,
When the Master goes forth in His terrors alone,
To gather His treasures, and garner His own.

III.
Mournfully, tenderly, bid we adieu
To him who lies stricken, the loving and true;
Father, and brother, and teacher, and friend,
Rest, rest from thy labor; thy toll hath an end.

IV.
Dust seeks its dust, and the spirit its God;
Yet still thou shalt live where thy footsteps have trod;
We cannot forget thee; thy works and thy name,
Are treasures immortal, which Death cannot claim.

V.
Lift up, kind Father, thy servant, we pray,
Who, toil-worn and weary, has drooped in the way;
And O take him tenderly up in thy love,
Home, home, to his rest in the mansions above.

Resolutions adopted by the Trustees of Milton College, at their annual meeting, held in Milton, July 1st, 1867, with remarks of Rev. D. E. Maxson, offered to the Board on the occasion.

WHEREAS, the cause of Education is one in its origin and aims, and all true educators, wherever located, are linked together by the strongest ties of common interests and aims, so that whenever an educator ceases from his work, all friends of the cause share in the loss; therefore Resolved, That in the death of Reverend and Professor William C. Kenyon, former President of Alfred University, not only has that institution suffered an irreparable loss, but the cause of education everywhere has lost a most efficient worker and life-long friend.

Resolved, That as Trustees of Milton College we extend our sympathy to the Trustees of Alfred University, and to the friends of the deceased, praying that his noble and unselfish devotion to the cause of Education may remain fresh in memory, to inspire those who may follow him in the great work to which he devoted his life.

Resolved, That the Secretary of this Board forward a copy of these resolutions to the Trustees of Alfred University, and also to the Sabbath Recorder for publication.

REMARKS.

To be educated truly, is to be unselfish. The true educator rises above all personal motives, all local prejudices, and plants himself on a platform that overlooks the whole field of human wants. Farthest possible from him are all feelings of envy and jealousy at the success of other institutions than the one he happens to be connected with. Our educational institutions must go even pace with our civilization as formative influences. As the army of emigration moves on towards the Pacific, our schools must plant themselves on the front line of each advancing column. When DeRuyter and Alfred send out their graduates, with the parting benediction they say, "Go, and as ye go, educate." When the Milton School took its place on the front of our Western movement, it was obedient to that voice which thus spoke for the future and for the West.

Alfred and Milton are one in more respects than usually make up the unity of institutions of learning. For many years, as at the present, a large portion of our Faculty have been educated at Alfred, while several of the Trustees are of the same class. The wife who survives Professor Kenyon was formerly a much-respected and successful teacher in our school. Being thus related, we feel it fitting that we should sit as mourners with others who mourn the loss of Professor Kenyon.

Few men, indeed, have lived so long a life in so few years. His life seemed at an end twenty years ago, and yet, feeling that he had not finished his work, he would not die. For all that time he has worked on reserved life forces, summoned to action by that indomitable will which surmounts all obstacles. More truly, and singly, was he devoted to the cause of education, in its broadest sense, than most educators. He gave all to the cause. When common prudence might have laid by something for self, his zeal for the cause gave it all. He did not love Alfred because it was Alfred, but because it represented the cause he loved. He loved Milton too, and every other school that worked with a spirit like his own. He was ours, and we were his.

You will pardon the emotions which choke my utterance, as I revert to facts which have bound so much of my life with his. He once worked with the hammer and file in a machine-shop on the bank of the Pawcatuck. From that shop he went to his work as an educator, and from that same shop his manly voice and encouraging words summoned me to the same avocation; and for fifteen years we stood side by side in the work. His memory is dear to me. I stand with a host to-day, whose inspirations to a manly life-work were kindled by the flame that burnt so brightly on the altar where he laid himself a willing sacrifice. Such a man needs not the cold testimony of inscriptions on marble monuments. It matters little that the remains of his worn-out body lie with the unknown dead in a foreign land. His memory is enshrined in a thousand hearts that beat warmer and stronger because they have been so close to his.

He was a martyr to the cause he loved. Had he been content to work less, he might have lived longer. But it is not in such natures to abate a single energy, when a good cause lags behind his glowing ideal. He had rather work than rest; he had rather die than live to no purpose. When the people, on whom he pressed the claims of his cause, failed to respond, he only gathered up a new energy of his own, to do what others should have done. Thus he not only worked for himself, but did vicarious work. Such is the nature of love for what is good, that sacrifice comes of the nature itself. Love is essentially vicarious; else the world had never known its Christ, Alfred had never known its University.

I am not forgetful of the noble men who have stood together to build up the Alfred interest in the great work of education, when I thus speak in the praise of the oldest and first-bitten of the band. They, too, have their reward in the gratitude of the many they have blessed. As one by one of these heroic educators falls, and as we pause to drop a tear over their graves, let us up and on to the work, confident that He who, in his earth mission, delights to lift the lowly, delights not less in all those who go to their work with a faith that never falters, a zeal that never flags, and a hope that is like an anchor to the soul.
