Community Table is the new dining facility located in the former Li&l Alf Café space on the second floor of Powell Campus Center. The venue, which unofficially opened in October, will host various events, including cooking classes; an "integrated kitchen" where student organizations can book the facility to prepare and eat a meal; faculty-staff hosted dinners with students; and "pop-up meals".

The facility will formally open early next semester, when a hand-crafted table and chairs will be put in place. A lighting fixture, made from a reclaimed barn beam with lighting globes crafted by Angus Powers, associate professor of glass, has already been installed.
