The first five minutes of play found the two teams on even terms but after that Rochester was never headed. The Rochester men sank shot after shot with uncanny accuracy and their brand of court work was superior to that of Alfred. Alfred's offense was fair at times, but their defense was weak. It was Rochester's size and speed which was the chief difficulty which Alfred fought with during the evening.

Ehre, Rochester forward, played the best game, sinking nine field goals For the losers three fouls. Nichols scored the most points. In the last few years Alfred has not made such a poor start as it did Friday night, but the team hopes to make up for the defeat in the coming engagements.

AMHERST, N. Y. UNIVERSITY AND RUTGERS FURNISH DIFFICULT OPPOSITION

A difficult schedule has been arranged for the football team for next fall with five conference games and two new opponents-Amherst and New York University. Three of the games will be played at home. Providence, Juniata and Susquehanna have been dropped from the schedule. If Alfred can win four of the five conference games it is estimated that she can lay claim to the conference for the first time in several years.

VERTED INTO AN EXTENSION SCHOOL

BUILDING WOULD BE USED BY CERAMIC SCHOOL

The Alfred New York State School of Agriculture has been selected by A. K. Getman, State Supervisor of Agricultural Education and the state budget committee as an agricultural extension school for next year. If the proposal is approved at the session of the legislature in January, 1927, classes at the Alfred school will be suspended after July 1, 1927 and the major portion of the faculty will devote itself to extension teaching in the high schools and among the farm people of Western New York. Alfred has already been carrying on extension work in the high schools of Livingston County this year under state supervision.

Upon the adoption of the proposition by the legislature the Agricultural school building will be loaned temporarily to the Ceramic school, postponing construction of a new Ceramic school building which has been sought from the legislature for the past four

DELEGATES PRESENT N. Y. S. A. MAY BE CON-PRES. DAVIS OUTLINES ALFRED'S FUTURE

URGES IMPROVEMENT IN QUALITY AND QUANITY

In the November Alfred University Publication is an address by President B. C. Davis recently given before the University faculty.

Dr. Davis divided his talk into three parts, taking up in turn Alfred's general program, her immediate program, and her program for the next decade.

He said in part "As I compare conditions under which Alfred's faculty begins to work for this year, without some of the limitations and restrictions of past years, which we have now outgrown, I am impressed with the fact that we are greatly blessed and that we are working under greater promise than at any period in the past. True, we need many things and some of them desperately, yet we expect to have them as the years go by, and our progress in the past ten years brightens the prospect for the years that are just ahead.

"Before making a statement of program we may well recall again the great questions that are always of vital importance and which are recurring every year and every day.

Asks Great Questions

Is Alfred measuring up to its responsibility and its opportunity as an educational institutional?

How can we make Alfred more of an inspiration to her students this year?

How can we give those who study here more incentive and power to develop intellectual and moral strength?

Is the example and influence of the faculty wholesome and noble and can it be further improved this year?

Are we really friendly and unselfishly interested in our students and inspiring them to show the same spirit

Our individual answers to these questions will have much to do with the effectiveness or in-effectiveness of any program we may make."

Defines General Program

Under Alfred's general program, President Davis outlined the objectives of the college as being those of a Christian Institution aiming to make men and women equipped through scholarship and character to serve;

A STUDENT ASSEMBLY

There occured last Thursday what, in our estimation, approached being a real student assembly. Instead of the faculty sitting on the stage to give the students a conception of what our intellectual guides look like en masse, the place of eminence was occupied by five students, their leader, the assembly chairman and the song leader. Every one there was pleased by the program given by these students in the first of its kind this year.

And that is what we are driving at. Why can't there be more assembly programs of that type? It "went over big" and with a little work and forethought a system might be devised whereby we could have members of the student body appear on the stage periodically in real student assemblies.

Such a plan would add spice and meaning to the assembly. The attendance at present doesn't include as many of the student body as it relation of administrative units. should. There are many students who shrink from the idea of going and listening to a speaker for a whole period. If they could see their classmates, friends and associates in the entertainment, and take their turn decade Dr. Davis places an enrollment too, it would drive the meaning of the gathering home to them.

We suggest that some live-wire faculty member take this matter up between 50 and 60 instructors. and work for its development. We are sure that many students would cooperate with him. Remember, we don't want every assembly; we only clude: a fully equipped gymnasium, suggest such a program periodically.

IS IT THE GUARANTEE?

Elsewhere in this issue is the football schedule for next year. It will ments of Philosophy and Education, be noticed that there is a return to the old habit of playing teams far English, German, Romance languages, out of our class. Amherst, New York University, Rutgers and Bonaventure History and Economics, which should appear on the list.

We had hoped that this nonsense had been discontinued with the common sense schedule played last season. But common sense seems to disappear where a high guarantee is concerned.

Wherein is there any advantage in playing against teams with whom the admitted fact that a defeat will result? If anything will ruin the the morale and spirit of a team it is going into a game knowing that there is no chance at victory and hoping only to keep the opponents to as low

This idea of playing big colleges has held its grip on Alfred's football schedules for many years and it was hoped that when a sensible program of contests was drawn up last year that the foolish habit had been abandoned. We now have the material for building a successful team next year and with a schedule like the one just passed we might well have come out on top. Now that hope is ruined. The psychology of defeat which had run rampant in our team for past seasons was about stamped out and the spirit of winning was developing for next year, only to be nipped in of methods for developing, through the bud.

Some will defend this plan by saying that it gives us advertising. Tis an advertisment indeed to see a row of goose eggs on Alfred's side of the scores. Also, what do we want of advertising among large schools? We insist that a few victories among schools of our class, or smaller if need be, would have far more advertising potency than glorious defeat against indomitable odds.

The students, alumni and supporters of Alfred do not want this either. Football is the game that makes the fame of a university and what person, ho matter how much in love with Alfred, can stand the razzing of his Alma Mater when he has only a list of defeats to be proud of? The men play in these games and come home with injuries which show their effects through the rest of the season. In the next game some small college is able to hand us a defeat only because the game the week before has crippled our best men. The outsiders have stood by us well in the current year or the next decade," said past in spite of repeated defeats, and many were expressing their convictions the speaker. "Other and important that the team would show up well next year. But how can we expect them to hold on forever if we continue in the policy of the past?

We hear much heated, indignant, and adverse comment on the practice of commercializing college athletics, but we must openly and frankly admit that the only reason we can surmise for the policy of engaging with the colleges mentioned above is the attractiveness of the healthy guarantees.

Defines Immediate Program

Alfred's immediate program, according to the speaker, includes an enrollment of 550, exclusive of summer school, and a faculty of 45. It includes an increased emphasis on right living in Alfred and the importance of spiritual values over material values; a campaign for increased friendliness in all faculty and student relations; following up Freshman week with a campaign to develop a personal technique which shall extend beyond Freshman week into the work of the whole year and through the entire college course; development of a better health program and greater care in physical examination and medical advice for students suspected of overwork, low vitality and undernourishment; secure better co-operation of the faculty in distributing equitably the student's load so that certain departments shall not monopolize an undue portion of the student's time and strength, while other departments suffer.

Several other aims were outlined by the speaker which have to do with the

So great had become the powers and we/lith of the Templars, that jealousy filled the heart of Philip the Fair, the infamous King of France. He entered into a conspiracy to bring about the downfall of the Order and soon summoned Jaques De Molay, who had been elected Grand Master in 1297, to appear for trial. Also, at his instigation, many Knight Templars were thrown into dungeons and tortured to death by most barbarous methods.

SIGMA CHI NU GIVES CHRISTMAS PARTY

The Christmas season was ushered in at Sigma Chi Nu, Saturday evening, by a semi-formal house party. The spirit of Yuletide was delightfully carried out by candle-light and torches of evergreen. The hilarious group danced to the syncopation of the Collegiate Orchestra, until intermission, when salad, sandwiches and coffee were served. The glowing hearth and perhaps the sprig of mistletoe added to the gayety of the occassion. seemed a very short time after intermission that midnight came, bringing the highly enjoyable party to a close.

It isn't so easy to get a murder confession with the present jury system, as it was in the days of Cock Robin.

MR. GOBLE RECOVERING FROM SEVERE ILLNESS

Sunday afternoon F. L. Goble's condition showed rapid improvement and there is no doubt but that he is out of danger. The doctor thinks that Mr. Goble is still very weak so that Prof. Burdick requests that no one call to see him as it is best for the patient to remain quiet.

RELICS OF THE EARLY EASTERN CIVILIZ-ATION IN STEIN-HEIM MUSEUM

PROF. FRASER READS PAPER ON OLD CURIOS

People coming to Alfred, if they asked the majority of the students about the Steinheim, would be startl ed at their lack of knowledge concerning the interior of the interesting appearing edifice. Perhaps they do not realize what enjoyment an hour or two spent there will bring.

Professor A. D. Fraser presented a paper at the Alumni Session last year on some of the extraordinary things he had noticed there. In addition to a large collection of Natural History articles, the Steinheim is full of Ele ments connecting the earlier world with the present. One of the oldest relics, is a piece of pottery representing a potsherd, whose composition and modeling shows it to belong to an age centuries before the Achaeans left Greece to recover the fair Helen. Other fragments are clay tablets from Babylonia and tiny bronze statuettes of the death god, Osiris, from ancient Egypt. Thes figures were placed in the casket of the deceased Egyptian to perform his duties in the next

From that time so rich in art, the Grecian age, is found a lion's head which was taken from the Athenian Parthenon, where it was used to carry rain water from the eaves of Alfred's center this year as the offensive center and defensive oil flask served the Greeks as our soap dishes do us, though Professor Fraser says. "As regards the artistic element, the credit is all on the side of the ancients"

The Roman era is represented by lamps, pieces of pavement, an incense cup from the tomb of Seneca, and coins of the Roman Republic and

These are only a very few of the things one can see in a hasty inspection of the Steinheim Museum.
