

University partners with Corning Community to offer degree

9/24/14

A new partnership between Alfred University (AU) and Corning Community College (CCC) will enable students to earn a bachelor's degree in early childhood/childhood education on the CCC campus.

Details of this bachelor's degree completion program will be shared at two upcoming information sessions. Both sessions will be offered Wednesday, Oct. 1 on the Spencer Hill campus, 1 Academic Drive, Corning. The first will be held at 4 p.m. The second will be held at 5:30 p.m.

The first group of students will be enrolled in January 2015 with an expected graduation date of December 2016. Upper-level education courses will be offered, and students will complete a minor in psychology through the program. A modified tuition rate will be offered for students who enroll in this degree completion program and financial aid will be available through AU.

Students will complete field experiences in local schools. Graduates of this state Education Department-approved program will be awarded a bachelor of Science degree in education from AU and meet the requirements for initial certificates in early childhood and childhood teachers.
