Falling Water, by David Boyajian ♡♡80, at the Chautauqua Institution through Aug. 22.

CHAUTAUQUA, NY – Alfred University alumnus and sculptor David Boyajian is exhibiting two pieces of his artwork at the Chautauqua Institution.

The sculptures – titled Cotyledon and Falling Water – are made of stainless steel and are being displayed as part of a group outdoor exhibition at Chautauqua Institution. The exhibition was installed June 14 and will be on display through Aug. 22.

Boyajian earned a BFA degree in ceramic art from Alfred University in 1980 and has a sculpture studio in New Fairfield, CT. He is an adjunct professor of foundations in the School of Visual and Performing Arts at Western Connecticut State University.
