Allegany County People We Need Your Help Now

Hello,

Allegany County is working to improve Internet service in Allegany County. As part of a study we are working on we need people to take a survey. It is important that we have many of these completed so that our data will improve.

Presently the U.S. Government is basing its understanding of our service capacity on only about 50 respondents to a previous survey. So the greater number of Allegany County users that we can get to respond the better.

I encourage you to forward this to other people that live and/or work within Allegany County and have them complete the survey within the next few weeks [Nov 16th target]. We are looking for businesses, agencies, educators, governments, and local residents to participate.

Near the bottom of the survey is a "speed test" link that is very important to click and complete as this puts your actual Internet connection information into the federal system. Please take a few minutes, click on the link below and complete the survey for us as well as the broadband speed test.

It is important that you take this from computers within Allegany County. It is OK to take the speed test from both your work and home computers as they will have different results. You can also report a Broadband dead zone in this test.

Here is the link to the Allegany County Broadband Survey: <http://survey.constantcon...>

Feel free to forward this note to others who live or work in Allegany County.

Here is that speed test Link direct: <http://www.broadband.gov/...>

Three One-Act Plays

Three One Act Plays by David Graham, local playwright. Tickets are $8 at the door.

Presented by The Players of Allegany County
Friday, Nov. 16 and Saturday, Nov. 17 at 7 p.m.
Nancy Howe Auditorium
David A. Howe Public Library
155 N. Main St., Wellsville
585-593-3410

One play, entitled, "Afternoon Tea," concerns the confrontation of two young women over a recent motor vehicle accident involving legal controversies. It quickly evolves into the individual conflicts and social needs each is experiencing.

A short monologue play, "Awards Ceremony," was written especially for this Players' presentation in collaboration with veteran Players actor Mark Hall, who gives the one-man performance. A rather verbose individual finds himself on stage in search of an elusive awards ceremony and proves to be bursting with engaging life stories.

Finally, "The Youth Who Spoke Only Browning" is a tense, dramatic play about a young man's life crisis and the unique strategy he employs to confront his inner demons. The action takes place in a psychiatrist's office. This play was also presented in New York City by theater students at Pace University in lower Manhattan.

Calling Hours, Memorial Service Saturday for John Stull

John L. Stull, professor emeritus of physics at Alfred University (AU) and member of the class of 1952, died Friday, Nov. 9, 2012, with Paula, his wife of 60 years by his side.

Services will be Saturday, Nov. 17, at Susan Howell Hall, on campus. Calling hours will be from 1:30-3:30 p.m., downstairs (handicapped accessible), with a memorial service at 4 p.m., upstairs, and a reception to follow.

The family requests that in lieu of flowers, donations be made to the Alfred University Observatory, Alfred University, 1 Saxon Drive, Alfred, NY, 14802.

Online condolences or remembrances are welcomed at www.bishopandjohnsonfuner...

Professor Stull graduated magna cum laude with a bachelor of science degree in glass technology in 1952. He earned both his master's degree, in 1954, and his Ph.D. (in the University's first Ph.D. class) in ceramics, in 1958, from AU. But as John would point out, not Alfred's first PhD- because "Stull" is an alphabetically challenged name.

He joined the Alfred University faculty as a professor of physics in 1958 and served as director of the University Observatory, re-named in 1989 as the Stull Observatory in his honor. He retired from the University in 1992.

During his tenure, Professor Stull served as chairman of the Alfred University Faculty Council and as director of the National Science Foundation's Astronomy Institute for Science Teachers, for which he oversaw a summer institute in observational astronomy for junior and senior high school science teachers.

In 1963, he invented the Stull-Ealing linear air track, a nearly friction free device used for physics instruction. His efforts for the University briefly extended into the realm of the Admissions Office, where he participated in recruiting efforts with his fellow Alfred personnel.

In addition to his extensive work on the design and construction of the Observatory and its telescopes, Professor Stull's research and education interests include development of computer programs and photography of extragalactic supernovae and gamma ray bursters. His work was published in a number of publications, including Astronomy, The Physics Teacher, Minutes of the Royal Astronomical Society and Telescope Making.

In 1997, Asteroid 31113 Stull was named for Professor Stull, following its discovery by the late faculty member Scott Weaver and faculty member David DeGraff using a telescope Stull designed and built.

In 2002, the Alumni Council gave Professor Stull its Alfred University Friend Award. In 2011, the Council presented him the Lillian T. Nevins Award for Lifetime Service to the University. The honor is given to alumni who have performed outstanding service, promoting the highest interests of Alfred University and its alumni.

In addition to his wife, Professor Stull is survived by two children, Marylee and Peter.
