PERSONALITIES

AU professor Steven Pilgrim tries to open his students' eyes to the real world—of technology.

Pilgrim, assistant professor of ceramic engineering and science, has taught students about electronic ceramics and polymers and other subjects for over three

Pilgrim said he chose to teach at AU because, "Alfred was one of the few universities that really seemed to care about its undergraduates."

Believing most people are ignorant of technology and the numerous uses of ceramics, Pilgrim travels to grade schools to perform demonstrations. When not teaching, Pilgrim volunteers as a Cub Scout den leader. He said he also used to enjoy kayaking and will start doing it again when his 7 and 8-year-old sons are old enough to go with him.

Pilgrim, who said scientists and engineers must experience "the real world," spent six years as a corporate scientist at the Martin Mariett Labs and has worked in defense contract research involving projects such as submarine sonar, the Star Wars mirror and Titan rockets.

Pilgrim said teaching at AU is "much more fun than being a corporate executive."

Econ class members cheat on exam

BY MICHELLE PANCOE

A class in the College of Business discovered an exam is easier to take when you have the answer key.

Before Thanksgiving break a student in a principles of microeconomics class found the answer key with the answer sheets, and another read the answers to the class. As a result, the test will not be counted.

Mehmet Karaaslan, assistant professor of economics, said he left the room to make copies of a page of the exam which had not printed properly.

"I trust you. You trust yourselves," he told the class as he left the room.

After he had left, a student realized the answer key was mixed in with the scantron answer sheets, said David Szczerbacki, dean of the College of Business, who is in the process of meeting with all the students in the class.

Another student began to read the answers to the class, Szczerbacki said. When he paused, he was encouraged by other members of the class to continue, said Szczerbacki.

A student returned the key to the front desk before Karaaslan returned, and the students finished their exams.

Szczerbacki and Karaaslan said students came to them soon after to report what had happened.

"I would like to believe most of the students in that class who inadvertently and passively participated in the event would not be able to live with it in their good conscience and would have confessed sooner or later," Karaaslan said.

"If you're not doing something to correct the problem, you're part of

Buried Child

REVIEW BY JASON GRAY

Opening night was a success, with every actor giving a strong overall performance.

Three actors stood out that evening. Senior Scott Macmillan played the crotchety patriarch Dodge incredibly throughout the play. Senior Dinese Nier, cast as the mother Halie, was a little flat in her off-stage voicing at the beginning, but had a remarkable presence when she came onstage. Junior Andrea Pinyan had good control over her character's shift between silliness and fear.

The show grew even better as the play progressed, with the actors performing strongest during the play's most intense passages.

The only real glitch during the show was an entrance miscue at the beginning of Act III. Once the action began, however, it was of no consequence.

AIDS Awareness Day recognized at Alfred

BY JEANNE VIGER

One in 250 Americans of all ages is infected with HIV, according to the Condomania web page. Using that statistic, there could be nine students on the Alfred University campus who are infected with HIV.

The AU community observed AIDS Awareness Day and Day Without Art on Dec. 2 to recognize people who have been infected with the AIDS virus. The Student Health Advisory Committee and Spectrum organized events that gave people the opportunity to reflect on HIV and AIDS and how they have affected their lives.

"Our activities were designed to give students an outlet for their feelings about HIV and AIDS," said Melanie Falzoi, coordinator of SHAC

SHAC, which is designed to educate students about health issues, sponsored speaker Mary Pappalardo. Pappalardo discussed her experience with AIDS, the disease which took the life of her son, in a speech Dec. 2 in Nevins Theater.

"Support and unconditional love should be given [to a person with HIV] no matter how it was contracted," quoted Falzoi of Pappalardo's speech.

Falzoi said Pappalardo also emphasized the need for AIDS education and community awareness.

"It is important for small towns and rural areas to acknowledge that AIDS is not just a city problem," Laurie DeMott, interfaith advisor, told the Dec. 3 Evening Tribune.

"It's important for the college campus to acknowledge the problem of AIDS," said DeMott.

Condom bouquets and pamphlets on HIV and AIDS were distributed at a SHAC information booth. A graffiti canvas was provided so people could write their feelings, remember someone or make a statement of encouragement dealing with AIDS, said Falzoi.

In addition to the speaker and information booth, a candlelight vigil was held on the porch of the Brick, officiated by DeMott.

"It was a beautiful prayer service," said Falzoi. "There were poems and prayers read some people were moved to tears," she said.

In recognition of AIDS Awareness Day, Spectrum sponsored a Day Without Art. Cariann Colman, secretary of Spectrum, said there are two activities associated with the day, which acknowledges the fact that the art society was "hit by disease." Art is covered to demonstrate what the world would be without art, and artists around the world take a moment of silence to reflect. □

SAVAP starts second year with more training and money

BY MEGAN ALLEN

Increased contacts, more money and longer training sessions for volunteers marked the beginning of the Sexual Assault Victims' Advocacy Program's second year.

SAVAP has reached more students this year through presentations, the confidential toll-free phone line and students approaching the volunteers, said Dana Rothrock, counselor and co-supervisor of the group.

The group is comprised of 16

AU student volunteers who have been trained by the counseling staff to help victims of sexual assault. They operate a toll-free emergency number which is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week while AU is in session.

Training this year was five days, increased from two days last year.

"We trained our socks off," said Cathie Chester, counselor and cosupervisor of SAVAP.

The longer training session was a very good change, said Amy Corman, a junior physics major who has been in SAVAP for two semesters.

"It gives us more time to become comfortable with what we have to do," she said.

The group received more funding this year from the Counseling Center, which allowed them to buy another beeper for volunteers who are on-call, making the operation quicker, said Rothrock.

She and Chester are currently looking for other sources of funding. With more money, members could attend training outside the University and meet students at other colleges with similar programs, said Rothrock.

Both organizers are happy with the program's progress. "I am real proud of the staff; we

"I am real proud of the staff; we provide a quality service," said Chester.

Corman said the group's work is "not fun, but it gives you a sense of purpose that you can do something to halp."

The members have been very dedicated and are doing a terrific job, said Rothrock.

Fiat Lux

Students cheated

Before Thanksgiving break, a business class exam answer key was read to the class by one of its students. The professor was notified shortly thereafter, and the exam scores were dropped.

The professor and the dean of the college were placed in a difficult position because there was no way to determine who did indeed cheat and who did not. Therefore, there was no way to single out anyone without starting an accusation war.

So the response to discount the test and incorporate the event into a lecture may have been the only choice other than doing nothing or failing the

But what precedent does this set? Had it been one individual student caught cheating, he/she would have been subject to University policies and procedures on cheating.

These policies outline the possible punishments for cheating. And while no specific honor code exists, AU's academic dishonesty policy does read:

"Unethical conduct is defined as any action which enables a student to receive credit for work which is not their own. Such conduct will not be

It goes on to specify what counts as unethical conduct, including "marking an answer sheet to deceive the person correcting it," "possession of unauthorized material that could be readily used during a test or examination," and "any form of communication during an exam or quiz." It ends with forbidding "any other form of cheating."

What if one student was caught cheating on a test that most of the class had actually cheated on? Would "everyone else was doing it" be an acceptable defense?

To an extent it was in this case.

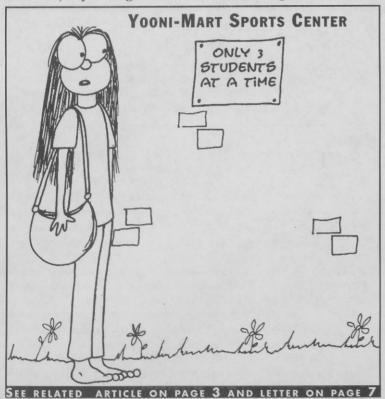

The academic dishonesty policy threatens failure and possible expulsion for cheating, plagiarizing or falsifying one's work some other way. But this class only had the test tossed out.

At a university where a quiet hours violation goes on your permanent record, shouldn't a note at least be attached to the files of the known cheaters?(Although one may find it amazing that such steps are necessary at this stage of adult education).

While one may sympathize with the students caught in the middle, it isn't unreasonable to expect that it's at least marked down that they passively participated. It shouldn't even matter unless they are caught cheating at some later date.

This university shows its undying support for its students on a regular basis. But perhaps that support should be conditional.

The school needs to apply a strong hand to those who break the rules. Otherwise, they're being cheated out of a true learning environment.

Brady Law should still be enforced

BY JONATHAN BAUM

Stipulations of 1993's Brady Handgun Law are now being reviewed by the United States Supreme Court.

Two sheriffs, one in Arizona and one in Montana, are challenging the federally mandated background checks law enforcement officials are required to complete before allowing the sale of a

The sheriffs are upset because they feel the time spent on background checks could be better spent on "investigative duties" and "real crimefighting."

One might wonder what other investigating these officers would rather be doing.

Statistics show that over 100,000 felons have been prevented from buying handguns since the law's inception.

Aren't "investigative duties" and "real crimefighting" supposed to include making it more difficult for convicted felons to commit more crimes?

The legal basis for these lawsuits is the constitutionality of the federal government enforcing laws that might be reserved for the states under the 10th Amendment.

Dropping this lawsuit under the umbrella of the 10th is a happy convenience for these law enforcement officials. It is doubtful that these sheriffs would dispute a federal law mandating police officers pass out guns to any citizens they feel fit to arm, as Arizona sheriff Richard Mack would advocate. Mack has said he believes every law-abiding citizen should have a firearm to protect themselves.

If officers like Mack are doing their jobs, one might wonder what all these citizens need protection from. After all, the Brady Law suppresses a good deal of crime via a simple background check.

Unfortunately, Supreme Court justices have already dropped comments saying the challenge to the constitutionality of this law may have merit. And if so, the success of the law would not be reason enough to circumvent the Constitution.

But until the states demonstrate some ability to curb crime and enhance gun control, the federal government is absolutely correct to mandate the background

After all, somebody has to stop "law enforcement officials" such as Mack from allowing criminals to arm themselves.

Mack didn't win re-election as sheriff in his county and will end his term in January. Thank god.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR Original CDC disks were not contaminated

DEAR EDITOR:

I would like to take this opportunity to clarify one point of your editorial in the Nov. 13 edition of the Fiat Lux. I want to make the point clear to our students that ORIGINAL disks given to them by the Career Development Center are virus-free. Computing Services has specifically verified that fact in analyzing how viruses were bypassing the protection in Olin. The problem is that Olin machines scan for viruses in the Windows environment, not DOS. Development Center disks used in any computer on campus (including personal machines) that were not scanned for DOS-based viruses were subject to corruption. So was every other floppy disk that was not scanned for DOS-based viruses that may have been used on that same machine. The problem reached the proportion it did because of the great numbers of floppy disks being transported from machine to machine in the DOS environment.

Right now, most of those transported DOS disks happen to be CDC resume program disks. Again I reinforce my original statement that the virus problem is INDIRECTLY related to the CDC disks. I hope the explanation makes this more clear.

I agree with Instructor Brien Pye that we have taken appropriate action to stop the DOS environment virus outbreak. We do recommend, however, that users scan their disks for viruses in every situa-

Parents thank AU Community members

DEAR EDITOR:

We would like to extend our thanks to those members of the Alfred University community who last month joined us in honoring the memory of our beloved daughter Diana. The service was beautiful and uplifting and helped us in our very difficult healing process. Thank you to all who spoke, whether at the service itself, or met us at some other, more private time. We will never forget your kindness.

A day or so after the memorial service, we received a letter of thanks from one of the people who was a recipient of one of Diana's organ donor gifts. He writes, "I hope that as you grieve for your loved one that there is some small spark of joy in knowing that there are very grateful people who love you for your courage in giving life and hope to them."

We have started the process to begin an annual award in Diana's memory. It will be for a biology student who best exemplifies both scholarship and service to the Alfred University community. If you would like to contribute towards the award, which we hope to present for the first time in April 1997, please contact Dr. Bill Stepp at University Relations, 871-2144.

Meanwhile, we hope that all members of the Alfred University community will keep in touch with us. You can reach us by e-mail at rhmossip@intac.com It is of great comfort when we hear from you. Alfred University will always have a special place in our lives.

Sincerely, Caroline and Richard Mossip

Art Union co-founder extends her thanks

DEAR EDITOR:

The Art Union would like to thank the following individuals and businesses for their support in bringing our new organization a successful start: Dean Mario Prisco, Assistant to the Dean Robin Caster, Secretaries of Art and Design Billie Saxton and Linda White, Co-chair of Freshman Foundation Joe Daun, Secretary of Art Recruiting Bev Johnson, Career Development Specialist Woughter, Student Activities Director Steve Harpst, the people of AU Security and from Ade Hall's catering services, Jean Hanks.

Also, the faculty members who have offered their help and advice: Roger Freeman, Peer Bode, Jessie Shefrin, Ted Morgan and Andrew Deutch.

Local business that donated prizes for our Halloween Party: Alfred Sub Shop, Alfred Hair and Tanning, The Gallery, AU Bookstore and KinFolk.

The people that made our Halloween party a success-the bands: Seven Maids a Milken and 100 Men, d.j.'s Corey Silverman, Arun Sharma (plus other), kissing booth Dennis, Doug Drissel, Morgan Weinrich, palm reader Paige Saez, and Alternative Cinema. Plus a huge thanks to the organizers and members or to anyone that showed support (to name a few): Megan Thomas, Carolyn Lowy, Ben Ellcome, Rebecca Feldman, Alexander, Michael Kogler, Denise Valente, Katie Nare, Rachel Lang, Kathryn B. Gerry, Orion Fredericks, Ian C. Epps, Jason Sargenti, Sue Tirrell of Mocha Jocha, Bethany Carlson and Jill

I hope I was able to remember everyone. There has been so much help over the past three months it's truly amazing. Thanks and happy holidays.

Sincerely, Lynne Pidel, Art Union co-founder and president

Alison Wolfe, a senior political science major, was elected secretary of Student Senate at a recent meeting.

Wolfe became secretary after Beth Larrabee resigned for health reasons.

Also discussed in recent meetings were an ice skating rink at AU and students rescheduling an exam should they have three in one day.

Zach Hampton, Senate president, announced work on an ice skating rink will begin as soon the weather is cold enough. It will be in front of the bandstand, he said.

Mike Christakis, Senate vice president, said he approached the deans about the three-exam rule in response to student concerns.

It used to be just during finals, but the Dean's Council has decided it will apply throughout the year, he said. He said if you have three or more exams on one day, bring it to the attention of your professors or dean and other arrangements will be made.

John Carvana, director of the Career Development Center, announced he will start a focus group to obtain student input about the CDC.

Other suggestions students gave him included staying open more evenings and using campus center boxes instead of e-mail to distribute information.

Christakis said the library is purchasing another ProQuest.

Christakis said another student concern was the smell from leaking garbage trucks. He said the company has agreed to compress the garbage only when the trucks are off AU property.

Also at recent Senate meetings, the Fiat Lux was allocated about $700 from Senate Allocations for new computer memory, women's rugby was recognized as a new organization and Hampton said proposals are being accepted for the space next to the Music Alley.

Students volunteered to be on the Senate Elections Committee. The committee will consist of Joe DiCarlo, David Walsh, Sara Hickson, Rob Paul and James Hampton congratulated the Rugby Club for finishing third in the New England region and Poder Latino for raising $700 for charity with their auction.

The day after the exam, Karaaslan asked students to anonymously write their responses to what happened during the exam. Student responses varied greatly.

Some students explained the events as Karaaslan and Szczerbacki did. Others denied anything occurred. Most students fell between the two extremes.

Many students admitted to giving in to human opportunism and peer pressure in writing down the Karaaslan said he decided to work the incident into his lecture on ethics and asymmetrical information. "It was a learning experience for everyone," he said.

Szczerbacki said he has met with or will meet with each student in the class. He said he is trying to make it an opportunity for learning—not a witch hunt.

Because the situation involves so many students, the exam grades will not be counted, said Karaaslan. He said the remaining three exams of the semester will be reweighted.

Szczerbacki said he and Karaaslan had tried to handle the situation without harming students who had "found themselves in a bad set of circumstances."

"It's about as equitable as you can get," said Szczerbacki.

Both Karaaslan and Szczerbacki said AU should have an honor code.

Karaaslan said an honor code would give confidence to those students doing the right thing.

"It is unfortunate that many students find themselves in a dilemma of doing the right thing versus group solidarity," Karaaslan said.

Fights break out on Main Street; Six arrested for brawls

BY SABRINA HARRISON

An attack on Gamma Theta Gamma, an Alfred State College fraternity, on Oct. 31 resulted in six arrests and Uni-Mart's implementation of a three-student limit inside the store.

The fight began at approximately 2 a.m. The manager of Uni-Mart said the brawl began at Gentleman Jim's and then worked its way down Main Street.

"The police were called and they dispersed the crowd. Twenty minutes later, more students came from the ASC direction and began throwing rocks through Gamma Theta Gamma's windows," the manager said.

A massive brawl with approximately 50 people involved ensued, said Dennis Ball, president of Zeta Beta Tau, an AU fraternity. ZBT, whose house is across from Gamma Theta Gamma's house, became involved in the fight when the brawl extended to their premises.

"We did not come to the aid of [Gamma Theta Gamma]. We were trying to get everyone off our lawn, " Ball

According to the Nov. 7 Evening Tribune, police returned to the scene and arrested six people.

Two of those arrested were brothers of Gamma Theta Gamma, one of whom the charges against were dropped, said Corey Phillips, president of Gamma Theta Gamma. The brother was an ASC alumnus who had come to the aid of another brother, Phillips said.

It was rumored that the attack on Gamma Theta Gamma was led by Psi Delta Omega, another ASC fraternity. Psi Delta Omega and Gamma Theta Gamma have had a long-standing rivalry, said Ball.

Phillips said Psi Delta Omega was not involved in the attack. "We have a reputation for fights, and as a result we were picked to fight with," Phillips said. Gamma Theta Gamma was attacked by what he called "an organized group of black people."

Ball said he felt the police did not arrest the people they should have. "The brawl was looking like a black and white thing. The people throwing rocks should have been arrested," said Ball.

As a result of the brawl, any person who comes near Gamma Theta Gamma's house without permission will be arrested, Phillips said.

During the brawl, police requested that Uni-Mart lock its doors from 2 to 3:30 a.m., the manager said. The police later sent a letter to Uni-Mart's corporate office requesting that the store close during the late hours of the night. As a result, Uni-Mart has adopted a rule that prohibits more than three students from entering the store at a time.

"Normally we do not enforce the rule unless there are problems. If there are any derogatory comments made at my employees, we will just lock the door, " the manager said.

The manager apologized for having to restrict students. "I'm not trying to lock them out," she said. "I am trying to work with the community. Sometimes rules have to be set and followed for everyone's protection."

AU groups awarded

STAFF REPORTS

Alfred University won three awards at a recent national conference for BACCHUS and GAMMA.

The National Outstanding Chapter award was presented to AU's GAMMA chapter. Ian Neuhard, advisor of SAIL, National the received Outstanding Advisor award.

Finally, AU was recognized for Worm Week, which celebrated National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week.

Greeks Advocating Mature Management of Alcohol is a group designed "to improve Greek life by creating responsibility and awareness of other drugs," said Melany Dow, president of GAMMA.

Dow said she feels GAMMA gets more recognition nationwide than it does on campus.

Neuhard, also director of AOD, was one of seven advisors nationwide to receive an award, said Dow.

David Boland, president of AWARE, a subgroup of SAIL, said Neuhard deserved to win the award.

"He is very atypical as an advisor because he relates very easily to the students," Boland said.

Last year's WORM Week also received national recognition. WORM Week celebrated National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week with activities such as WORMstock, Wing Night with dirt sundaes and movies shown in McLane.

Fast food restaurant may soon speed into town of Alfred

BY KENNETH LEIDIG

The Alfred community will have its first fast food restaurant if a lease agreement between BP owner Mike Snyder and developer Steve Carlson is approved by the town of Alfred, according to the Alfred Sun.

Snyder, the proprietor of the BP station on Route 244, said he hopes an Arby's restaurant will be built adjoining the BP. Carlson would lease the property from Snyder for the Arby's.

According to the Alfred Sun, the Arby's will be a sit-down restaurant and will include the first drive-thru in the town of Alfred.

However, the Arby's will not be within the village limits. The town of Alfred, unlike the village, has the space to host Arby's, said Alfred Mayor William Hall.

"It also has the year-round clientele," he

Neither the town nor the village will acquire much revenue from the business venture. "Allegany county reaps the benefits," said

Construction on the restaurant could begin by midwinter, assuming there are no complications, said Snyder.

Worse than AIDS

AIDS could be virtually eliminated in one generation simply by not living promiscuously, by denying ungodly lusts. Of course, that won't happen, because there is a worse disease infecting every human being. The great Jewish King David, called a man after God's own heart, nervertheless said, "in perversity was I born, and in sin did my mother conceive me." We are all born with sin, and the Bible says that, "the soul that sins, it shall die." All sin is against God. He has the right to set the payment necessary for sin's offense. That payment is death: first the death of the body, then of the soul in hell and the lake of fire which is the second death. But God was willing to take the cost of that payment upon himself. All those who see the death of the Lord Jesus Christ on the cross as payment for their debt can be free of the second death without fear, knowing they belong to God, and hope of even avoiding physical death completely if Christ returns to this world in their lifetime.

'Tis the season to be stressed!

BY MARY BETH BRUDER

Final exams! Final projects! Holidays! The end of the semester! Grades! Right along with all of those is stress.

Stress can happen at any time for any reason, but it usually hits most people around this time of the year, especially on college campuses. Luckily, there are ways and people to help deal with this emotion.

Stress is the physical, mental and emotional reactions you experience as the result of changes and demands in your life, according to the Healthwise Handbook.

Stress is a major thing on campus at this particular time in the year, said Shelly Caruso, a registered nurse at Alfred University's Health Center.

Students do not seem to be as worried about holiday stress as they are about the upcoming final exams and semester grades. Freshman Mike Creter is stressed about finals because "they count more than anything else, and I have to get my grades up."

"Some students simply sleep the stress away, which may cause more stress because sleeping is not getting the work done."

Creter deals with the stress by playing video games. Other students simply sleep the stress away, which may cause more stress because sleeping is not getting the work done.

Caruso recommends that people deal with the stress by using relaxation techniques or seeking counseling. If they are having headaches or trouble sleeping, they should avoid caffeine and try taking hot showers before going to bed. Caruso warned that symptoms of stress could actually be depression.

Depression is both a chemical imbalance in the brain and a physical problem. There is usually a family history of depression.

When dealing with depression, the health center usually has an interview and recommends counseling. If the depression is severe, a medicine called serotonin is introduced to help stabilize the brain's imbalance.

Marnie Kennedy, an R.A. in Openhym Hall, is also aware of the stress of the season. She said she feels it affects the entire residence hall because it gets quieter, there is a lot of talk about the upcoming exams and there is a lot of tension in the air. Kennedy is also on the lookout for signs of depression.

"I look for whole personality changes, more than is a result of stress," she said.

Stress hits everyone at this time. Caruso said, "It's only because of the season itself, trying to get so much done at once."

The best ideas are to try and relax, but plan ahead. This will usually restore some of the good holiday cheer to the air. □

Final production stages of Buried Child

BY JASON GRAY (PART 3 OF 3)

With opening night only one rehearsal away, Steve Crosby is not nervous. Or maybe he's just acting calm. Either way, he is optimistic enough about the show to take time from set construction to speak with me again, this time mostly about the final stages of production leading to opening night.

After completing what actor Allen Adams billed as a "great" rehearsal, Crosby is very excited about the first show, knowing that his actors have come together.

He described the final stage of production as a Pinocchio doll. All the parts that have been worked on individually over the weeks are being put together. But if it remains just a conglomeration of parts, it is just a wooden doll. The show needs that breath of life to make it real, to take the show from being a group of actors playing roles to a living portrayal of a disjointed American family.

This is the time to make certain that the actors are fully secure in the technical details, character work, blocking and interactions with other characters.

Excitement is always at its peak opening night because the show is still a mystery. This text, with this group of actors, on this set, has never been seen before. The excitement and adrenaline help provide extra focus for the actors

The unfortunate thing that can happen, which Crosby hopes to avoid, is what he terms "Sophomore Night." This is when there is a letdown in energy the second show, lowering the intensity of the performance.

On the technical side, the set must be finished, the lighting plot and cues worked on and props readied for the show, hopefully in enough time for the actors to become acquainted with them.

I've been looking forward to writing this issue's column for some time now. You see, Christmas is my favorite time of year and some of my favorite pieces of literature revolve around the holiday: T.S. Eliot's "The Journey of the Magi," Dylan Thomas' "A Child's Christmas in Wales" and O. Henry's wonderful story, "The Gift of the Magi."

While home on break listening to Bing Crosby croon out some carols, I was shuffling through several column ideas. I looking over to my bookshelf and thought, of course—"A Christmas Carol."

I've loved Charles Dickens' story ever since I was a little kid, and seeing a stage production every Christmas has been a tradition in my family since I was seven. I've also watched, and made my family watch, "Scrooge," played by everyone from Tim Conway to a duck with a thick Scottish brogue.

I want to leave everyone for the semester with my favorite passage from the book. Scrooge's nephew, Fred, has entered the miser's gloomy counting house to invite him yet again to a Christmas dinner. In response to Scrooge's invective that Christmas has never done Fred any good, the nephew speaks:

"There are many things from which I might have derived good, by which I have not profited, I dare say, Christmas among the rest. But I am sure I have always thought of Christmas time, when it has come round—apart from the veneration due to its sacred name and origin, if anything belonging to it can be apart from that—as a good time: a kind, forgiving, charitable, pleasant time: the only time in the long calendar of the year, when men and women seem by one consent to open their shutup hearts freely, and to think of people below them as if they really were fellow-passengers to the grace, and not another race of creatures bound on other journeys. And therefore, uncle, though it has never put a scrap of gold or silver in my pocket, I believe it has done me good, and will do me good; and I say, God bless it!"

Dickens, Charles. "A Christmas Carol."

I was surrounded by people in white lab coats, their hands enclosed in thin layers of protective plastic. They wielded needles, promising I would feel only a "prick." Yes, I had entered the world of an American Red Cross blood drive.

When I donated blood at the last drive held in the Knight Club, it was the third time I had donated. Not to say that I am any sort of "pro," since I am hardly calm when I donate blood. Actually, I am always amazed at myself; even at this most recent drive I found myself very anxious, trying not to find an excuse to leave.

It's not like I didn't know what was going to happen, and I don't generally consider myself afraid of needles. Maybe it was the sterility of the equipment? Maybe I was afraid they would run out of free cookies and "orange stuff" for people who had donated?

One of the things I hate about donating blood is that they take your blood pressure. No matter how calm I can force myself to look on the outside, the volunteer checking my pulse quickly knows the truth: yep, this girl is terrified.

I do enjoy the chitchat the volunteers involve themselves in while monitoring the people who are hooked up to needles, donating blood. One man joked that the woman about to "stick me" had forgotten her glasses at home. Yes, there's nothing quite like needle humor.

I don't think everyone should attempt to donate blood. If needles make you faint, then hey, please feel free to avoid the entire campus center on blood drive days if it makes you feel more comfortable.

But if you are healthy and needles don't turn your stomach, why not donate? As they say, you never know when someone close to you, or even you, will need extra blood. And those wonderful "Starve a mosquito - donate blood" stickers—who would want to miss those?

Music prof conducts overseas

BY KENNETH LEIDIG

Gail Lee, assistant professor of music and orchestra director, recently won a contest in Bulgaria.

"It was very exciting," she said.

While visiting Bulgaria this past summer, Lee entered a contest for the position of guest conductor of the Varna State Philharmonic. As the winner, she was invited to conduct a concert over AU's fall break.

Lee chose all the selections played, including favorites by Bernstein and Tchaikovsky.

"They played well," said Lee.

Thankfully, the language of music is very common, so Lee did not have to rely on her translator much to rehearse with the instrumentalists, she said

She is very happy to be returning to the Bulgarian orchestra in May of 1998.

Lee completed her graduate work at Northwestern University. Before coming to Alfred in the fall of 1995, she was associate conductor of the Taiwan Symphony.

Football team loses to Wash & Jeff, takes 2nd in PAC

On Saturday, Nov. 9, the Alfred Saxons attempted to do what every other football team in the PAC has failed to do for the past 10 years—defeat Washington & Jefferson.

Alfred hosted the Presidents on Merrill field, playing for the conference title. Going into the game, Alfred had a record of 3-0 and W & J was 4-0 in the conference.

Alfred's overall record for the season was 3-5, and the Presidents were at 6-1, suffering their only loss to Buffalo State.

This was the Saxons' last home game of the year and the most important one.

Alfred's offense started the game by picking up two quick downs by sophomore Jeff Colasanti and junior Jason Fenner. But the Saxons soon had to punt it away as the Presidents' defense stepped up.

The Presidents' offense entered the game led by quarterback Jason Baer and tailback Jake Williams. Baer connected with tight-end Ron Bodnar for two big plays to set up Williams with the first score of the game to make it 7-

Fenner helped to give AU another first down, but again the drive ended with a punt by sophomore Chris Zanghi.

Baer returned to the field and picked the Alfred defense apart with his passing to make the score at the end of the first quarter 21-0.

Freshman Saxon quarterback Ryan Woodruff, who played well last game against Union in his first-ever start in a varsity game, took the field and was quickly picked off.

Baer and Bodnar again proved to be a powerful combination to give them a 42-0 lead.

At the end of the half, Colasanti busted out with a long run to put AU in the red zone. Woodruff connected with Fenner for a 10-yard gain, then hit flanker Tom Callen for a touchdown. The halftime score was 42-7.

At the half, Baer had 219 yards passing, a reminder of why he is the top-rated passer in the PAC.

In the second half, Alfred's first play from the line of scrimmage was a touchdown strike of 71 yards from Woodruff to junior Tom Callen. But this was not enough as the Presidents' explosive and talented defense proved to be too much. The Saxons lost 63-13.

Playing commendable defense in the loss, Wil Green tied the alltime career tackle record of 349 and then broke it the following game against Grove City.

Playing their final game on Merrill field were Tony Fanale, Brian White, Devin Dressman, David Fitzgerald, Max Freeman, William Marks, Bill Albanese, Justin Kwoka, captain Matt Vincent, Charles Hopkins, Mike Manning and captain Wil Green.

After the loss to W & J, Alfred traveled to Grove City to clinch their second place finish in the President's Athletic Conference. The Saxons won 38-27. □

SPORTS LETTER TO THE EDITOR DEAR EDITOR:

In response to "Alfred Athletics Stagnant at Best" in the Oct. 30 issue, I would like to enlighten present Fiat Lux readers and writers as to the rise and fall of various men's sports at AU over the last decade.

Football. Coach Moretti built the team into a contender because of quality staff and outside recruiting support. In fact, the Saxons had two former NFLers on staff at one point. Did you know that Ithaca was our only nemesis because of (1) less academic competitiveness, and (2) virtual athletic scholarships in the form of grants and such?

AU football now pays the price of depleted resources.

Men's swimming. Schaeberle had a great record because of great swimming talent. It was they who did the big recruiting.

Men's basketball. Former coach Ron Frederes, a not-so-nice guy and an egomaniac, did in fact build a winning program. Men's basketball hasn't recovered since his departure. He played for the North Carolina Tar Heels. Did you know that?

Men's lacrosse. Former coach Al Brown built that program and gave AU the reputation it has today. In its infancy, AU lacrosse was notorious for being the penalty-minute-leading "Bad News Bears" of upstate New York. They played dirty, and winning was just an afterthought.

Track & field. The odd sport out. Collectively, the team has been mediocre for a long time. Success should be attributed to individual merits.

The theme here is that athletic budgets have been sacrificed in the name of academics for admissions purposes. The irony is, winning athletic programs attract students, student athletes and non-student athletes who like to come out and see their teams win. Maybe the AU administration forgot that sporting events are what draw the alumni back.

And what's the big deal with dissolving a sports conference that Alfredian John McLane proudly created a little over a generation ago? Maybe they'd like to take his name off the gym too, and sell the rights to a major corporation. How does this read, sports fans: "Welcome to the Uni-Mart Center."

Are we now so desperate for wins at the cost of respect that we are playing walkovers like Thiel, Bethany and Waynesburg? I actually went to the Ursinus game. No one in that town knew where the field was. Wake me from this nightmare.

To AU's present student body, I leave you with this: We used to win—a lot.

P.S. Kudos to women's sports. By their omission, they have earned the label of non-controversial. P.P.S. I didn't much care for former sports information director Pat Gillespie. His obsession with statistics made him a candidate for the X-Files, but he was damn good. Another loss to the Athletic Department. In effect, at least partly, AU no longer has a "Saxon Warrior" newsletter for alum.

Sincerely, Greg Cohen Former Fiat Lux Sports Editor Class of '90

SPORTS NOTES

Four members of the football team were honored as first team All-Stars by the PAC. Senior Wil Green took the only defensive spot for the Saxons as linebacker. On offense, the three honored Saxons were as follows: senior Max Freeman at tailback, junior Jason Fenner as split end and sophomore Eric Schwarz at left tackle. Seven additional Saxon players made second team, while five more earned honorable men-

FiatSports newsmakers

The editorial staff of the Fiat Lux has named the Fall 1996 Fiat Sports Newsmakers. The two athletes were chosen from four nominees each, all of whom were entertaining on the playing field and equally entertaining to write about and photograph.

Men nominated were: Max Freeman, football; Dexter Morrison, soccer; Brian White, football; Christian Weigandt, cross country.

Women nominated were: Evelyn Trzeciak, soccer; Hannah Merle, volleyball; Liz West, soccer; Jill Viggiani, soccer.

Max Freeman is well-known to Saxon football fans as number 22. The tailback set career records for rushing touchdowns (33) and total touchdowns (38) in the last game of the season, against Grove City. As a sports medicine major, Max is the athletic trainer for the men's lacrosse team. Freeman will be in the stands next season, as he will still be in Alfred working on his other major in elementary education.

Track and Field

Evelyn Trzeciak is a business administration major. She played center midfield and started all four years in Alfred. Number 21 scored 11 goals this season and led the team to the State Championship semi-finals and a record of 13-5-1 as a co-captain. Evelyn is also a member of the AMA and the a cappella group, the Segues.

Winter teams look at upcoming season relationships in a team."

Topping Aldrich's list of returning members on the men's team are seniors Christian Weigandt, Brian White and Levie Johnson, juniors David Devir, E.J. Valitutto and Zach Homrighaus and sophomores Generoso and Mike Thompson.

Since the women's team is only in its second season, the list of returning members is smaller. Aldrich listed sophomore Heather Caputo, freshman Sha-Nekwa De Roche, and freshman Drina Porter as team members.

Newcomers who will enhance the team are freshman Rob Winkky and sophomore Shane Grandusky in the middle-distance and distance events, freshman John Wolcott in pole vaulting, freshman Holly Rife for throwing, freshman Olivia Shea in sprints and jumps, and freshmen Megan Stuart and Sarah Taillon in middle-distance and distance events.

The team started the winter season with the Cornell Relays on Dec. 7.

Swimming & Diving

The swim team has a fresh look for the 1996-1997 season. Head coach T.J. Davis is new to Alfred athletics, and his teams are both fairly inexperienced.

Davis previously coached at the University of Rochester and, most recently, Union College. However, this is his first head coach position.

Davis is taking over two young teams. Also, the men's team has problems with size. "Our numbers are down," said Davis.

Some members have returned from last year's team to lead the Saxons. Captains are brothers Bobby and Phil Craver. Bobby is a sprinter and has already made a mark by winning both the 100meter butterfly and breaststroke in the Alfred-Lycoming meet.

Freshman Brian Striker has grabbed fans' attention early by winning the 100 and 200 freestyle sprints in the first two meets.

The women are led by senior Catherine Neuberger and junior Shannon Youmell. Also returning are senior Amber Apel and sophomore Melanie Ligerman. Youmell has been sweeping the sprints in the first few meets. Also faring well in the shorter races is Amber Brooks. The freshman has won the 100-meter breaststroke in all three meets.

Another freshman who is excelling is Katherine Ernst. She won both the one and threemeter diving events against Wells College.

In the longer races, Ligerman is collecting the first places. The 500 and 1000-meter freestyle events are being dominated by the sophomore.

The move to the PAC has not altered the team's prime targets. "There are not many PAC teams," said Davis, "The pinnacle of our season is the New York State Championships."

Although the Saxons do have conference meets, the New York teams are the big rivals. Ithaca, Union, Hamilton and Hartwick make up the biggest four. "We're going to go after those four teams," said Davis, "Hopefully we'll break them up a little."

The schedule is now free until Jan. 15, when the Saxons take on Binghamton at Alfred. Also on the agenda is a series of outdoor practices in sunny Florida during early January. However, everything is just preparation for the big championship in February.

night. The sophomore, number 35, also had 25 points in the Dec. 7 win over Pitt-Bradford. The team is 3-1 following the game and faces Grove City, its first conference rival, Jan. 18 at home.

Head women's basketball coach Jeannette Yeoman is hoping for a better year record-wise.

"I think we can go into this conference and possibly come out on top," said Yeoman. Although the team does not know much about the PAC opponents, they have set high goals, said Yeoman.

The team will look very familiar to Alfred sports fans. Six returning players, well-known senior volleyball player Hannah Merle and a transfer from Alfred State make up the squad.

The majority of the team is still young, however-mainly juniors and sophomores.

"We're young, but we have a lot of experience," said Yeoman.

Leading the team are juniors Jessica Greeley and Christie
