

Training specialist hired for Instructional Technology Services

10/20/08

Meghanne A. Freivald of Springwater, NY, is Alfred University's new instructional technologist, hired this fall in the Instructional Technology Services Department to support faculty in their use of Blackboard programming and other instructional technologies. In addition, she offers technology training to both faculty and staff. Freivald earned a master of arts degree in educational theater from New York University. She also received a bachelor of arts degree in theater arts and a bachelor of science degree in elementary education with a concentration in English from the State University of New York College at Fredonia. Before coming to AU, Freivald worked as an English-as-a-second-language teacher at the Monroe (County) #1 Board of Cooperative Educational Services adult education program in Fairport, NY.