CORNING, NY -- Members of the Alfred University Athletic Training Club assisted medical personnel staffing the Wineglass Marathon earlier this month.

Nine members of the club, along with Josh Long, an Alfred University athletic trainer, worked hand-in-hand with the race medical director to provide support to runners participating in the Oct. 2 Wineglass Marathon. The Alfred contingent assisted runner suffering from cramping, musculoskeletal injuries and general fatigue.

It marked the third straight year the Alfred University Athletic Training Club has assisted at the marathon, which is run between the city of Corning and village of Bath. More than 6,500 runners participated in this year's event.

The following members of the Alfred University Athletic Training Club joined Long in assisting at the event: Becca Alexander, Alex Barsky, Cody Cornelius, Laura Krawczyk, Evan Linza, Ryan Paris, Courtney Slack, Emily Whitehouse and Matt Zahn.
